

First page:

On official occasions the flag is raised above the Rathaus or town hall in Bremen. Its red and white stripes and cubes have earned it the nickname "bacon flag". The state coat of arms with its two keys and three lions adorns the centre.

Previous page:

This terrace is a typical example of the Bremer Haus, found in this form only in Bremen. Streets of houses like these were built between 1880 and 1930 and many boasted a spacious conservatory.

Below:

There are many pleasant little villages in the area around Bremen, such as the former artists' colony of Fischerhude whose development was inextricably linked to that of Worpswede. One of the most popular venues here is Körbers Gasthof.

Page 10/11: Neuer Hafen or the new harbour in Bremerhaven is proving to be a huge tourist magnet. Where emigrants once set off for America, visitors can now explore a number of attractions, including the Columbus Centre (centre), the German Museum of Shipping (right), a museum of emigration (Deutsches Auswandererhaus), a zoo and, new in 2009, the Klimahaus on the climate of our planet.

Contents

12
.....

Bremen – a village with trams

26
.....

From the marketplace to the Weser –
the city centre

Page 62

Bremen architecture –
two unique examples

Page 80

Brown cabbage,
sausage and scouse:
culinary Bremen

86
.....

From the Lesum to Nordenham – the environs

Page 104

Artists' colony on a devil's moor – Worpswede

Page 114

Artists' colony on the Wümme – Fischerhude

120
.....

Harbouring history in Bremerhaven

134 Index

135 Map

136 Credits