

Contents

Preface	VII
Chapter 1: The Modern and Historical Harvey	1
Chapter 2: How Harvey Arrived at the Discovery of Blood Circulation – the Modernist Rendering of De motu and Its Value for History	3
Chapter 3: The Dating of Harvey’s Discovery and the Composition of De motu – What Did Harvey Mean by ‘Nine Years and More’ and a ‘Few Years’?	6
Chapter 4: The Harveian Aristotle and the Aristotelian Harvey	13
The Influence of Fabricius (1537–1619) and of Padua	13
The Harveian Aristotle	14
The Final Causes in De motu	14
The Aristotelian Background to Harvey’s Empirical Approach	18
Macrocosmic Analogies and Circular Symbolism	20
The Vital Principle and the Aristotelian Harvey	21
The Aristotelian Harvey	22
Atomism – Preformationism (Gassendi, Sennert, Highmore versus Aristotle-Harvey). Aristotelian Monism and Epigenesis versus Dualism and Preformationism	23
Atomism Underlying Preformationism. Gassendi (1592–1655) versus Aristotle	23
Daniel Sennert (1572–1637) and Nathaniel Highmore (1613–1684)	24
Aristotelian (Monist) Epigenesis versus (Dualist) Preformationism	25
Action from a Distance versus Touch – Harvey versus Aristotle	27
Harvey and the Aristotelian ‘Mean’ (Mesotes)	28
Chapter 5: Harvey’s Concept of Irritability and Its Root in Aristotelian Monism – Anticipation of Glisson	34
Tissue Irritability and the Blood	36
Chapter 6: Circular Symbolism – Franciscus Piccolomini of Padua – Cesalpino, the Aristotelian, and the Reasons for His Failure	37
Franciscus Piccolomini of Padua on the Circular Pattern in Animal Motion	38
Cesalpinus, the Aristotelian, and His Failure	39
Chapter 7: Harvey and the ‘Black Sheep’: Parallels versus ‘Influence’	42
Harvey and the Paracelsian Tartar	42
Harvey and the ‘Modern’ Concept of Disease – Van Helmont’s Ideas	43
Harvey and ‘Psycho-Somatic Disease’ – a Parallel with Van Helmont	45
Harvey Not a Humoralist and Van Helmont’s Position	46
Van Helmont on the Movement of Blood	48
Harvey’s Unorthodox Cures	49
The Monist (Aristotelian) Principle in the Work of Paracelsus and Van Helmont	52
Paracelsists Professing Aristotelianism – Quercetanus (Du Chesne)	55
Harvey and Robert Fludd	58
Other Unorthodox Acquaintances (Turquet de Mayerne, John Woodall, George Thomson)	60

Chapter 8: Harvey and Impetus-Theories – Traces of Possible Galilean Mechanical Philosophy in Harvey – The Role of Impetus in Harveian Physiology	62
The Role of Impetus in the Work of Harvey	63
Chapter 9: Alternate Filling of Heart and Arteries – Systole and Diastole – Harvey's Predecessors Pre- and Post-Columbian	67
Campanella on the Movements of Heart and Arteries	71
Chapter 10: Harvey, Aristotle and Mediaeval Revisionism (Impetus Theory) – Antiperistasis and Its Limitations – The Contraries	74
Impetus Secondary (Reactive) to Sensus	77
Harvey's Mention of Projectiles	80
Harvey on the Instrumentality of the Genitures	81
Sennert on Seminal Animation versus Instrumentality	84
Sennert in the Light of Harvey's Criticism	92
Harvey Abiding by the Aristotelian Tradition	92
Harvey and the Orthodox Aristotelians, Mediaeval and Contemporary	94
Albertus Magnus against 'Fifth Essence' and 'Light' as Superadded to the Body	95
Albertus Magnus against 'Fifth Essence' and 'Light' as Additional to the Body	96
Harvey and Albertus Magnus	98
Pietro d'Abano on the Instrumentality of Semen	99
Franciscus Piccolomini on Instrumentality and Semen	100
Jacob Schegk – on the Formative Virtue, Soul and Heat	100
Ponce de Santacruz	104
Harvey and Cremonini	107
Aristotelian Tradition and Impetus Theories	108
Epilogue	111
Chapter 11: Appendices	113
1. Johannes Walaeus – Confirmation and Original Experimental Amplification of Harvey's Discovery (1641)	113
2. Harveian Quantification and the Circular Motion of the Bile (Reverhorst, 1692)	135
3. The Origin of Pulsation and Blood Movement in the Auricle – Pietro d'Abano to Harvey – The Aristotelian Lead	137
4. Aristotle's 'Third' Ventricle of the Heart	138
5. Galen's Supposed Knowledge of the Pulmonary Transit ('Lesser Circulation') and Harvey	140
6. The Spread of Poison and Contagium by Ascending Venous Blood Flow – Ficinus (1489) to Harvey	147
7. Flux and Reflux of Blood in Ancient Iranian and Hebrew Sources	151
8. Animal Motion, Motion of the Heart and Generation Obeying a Circular Pattern	152
9. Putrefaction – Fermentation – Generation (Aristotle, Fracastor, Harvey)	155
10. Harvey's Anticipation of the 'Biogenetic Law'	157
11. Harveian Factual Errors	158
12. The 'Black Grain' and the Origin of the Vessels in the Heart	160
13. Semen and Its Luminous – Radiating – Virtue	161
14. Cesalpino and the Two Editions of His Peripatetic Questions	167
Chapter 12: Final Assessment and Conclusions	172
Additional Bibliography	175
General Index	178
Addendum	188