

Contents

Multiple Histories? Changing Perspectives on Modern Historiography Angelika Eppe and Angelika Schaser	7
---	---

1. Historiography in flux

Gendering Historiography in the Global Age: A U.S. Perspective Bonnie G. Smith	27
--	----

Fear of Plurality: Historical Culture and Historiographical Canonization in Western Europe Maria Grever	45
--	----

2. Gendering the National Canons of Historiography

Biography, Gender and the Deconstruction of a National Canon Irma Sulkunen	65
--	----

Gendering the Polish Historiography of the late Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries Claudia Kraft	78
--	----

3. Dividing Lines between the Traditional Canon and Excluded Histories

Gendering Tradition and Rewriting Church History Ulrike Gleixner	105
--	-----

Gossip or History? Popular Turkish Historians and the Writing of Ottoman Women's History Ruth Barzilai-Lumbroso	117
"There is so much, and it will all be history": Feminist Activists as Historians, the Case of British Suffrage Historiography, 1908–2007 Krista Cowman	141
Opening up Narrow Boundaries: Memory Culture, Historiography and Excluded Histories from a Gendered Perspective Sylvia Paletschek	163
4. The Gender-coded Profession of the Historian and Alternative Professional Careers
History as Argument – Alexandra Gripenberg, Ellen Key and the Notion of True Feminism Tiina Kinnunen	181
Tapping New Resources – Setting Old Boundaries: Female and Male Historians under National Socialism Heike Anke Berger	208
Gendering Historiography? Problems and Suggestions Martina Kessel	225
Contributors	234
Index	238