

CONTENTS

| | |
|---------------------------------|-------|
| List of Cases | xvi |
| List of Statutes | xviii |
| List of Abbreviations | xxii |
| INTRODUCTION | 1-9 |

CHAPTER I

THE MEDIEVAL LAND LAW (1066-1485)

| | |
|---|-------|
| § 1. Leading Distinctions | 10-21 |
| The real actions | 11-16 |
| The leading distinctions created by the real actions | 16-21 |
| Free and unfree tenure | 16-19 |
| Real property and chattels real | 19-20 |
| § 2. Tenures | 21-48 |
| The free tenures | 23-29 |
| The incidents of the free tenures | 29-36 |
| Legislative modifications | 36-39 |
| Unfree and copyhold tenure | 39-48 |
| Modes of cultivation | 39-40 |
| The manor | 40-41 |
| Nature of unfree tenure | 41-42 |
| Growth of copyhold tenure | 42-44 |
| Settlement of the law as to this tenure | 44-45 |
| Its unsatisfactory character | 45-48 |
| Its abolition. | 48 |
| § 3. Estates and Interests. | 48-77 |
| Estates in land held by a free tenure | 49-71 |
| Origin of the conception of an estate | 50-52 |
| Estates in possession | 52-65 |
| The estate in fee simple | 52-55 |
| The estate tail | 55-60 |
| Estates for life and lesser estates | 60-65 |

| | |
|--|---------|
| Estates in expectancy—Reversions and | |
| Remainders | 65-68 |
| Co-ownership | 69-70 |
| Estates created to secure money lent | 70-71 |
| The interest of the lessee for years | 71-73 |
| The effects of the Property Acts | 73-77 |
| § 4. Inheritance, Dower, and Curtesy. | 77-89 |
| Inheritance | 77-87 |
| Dower and curtesy | 87-89 |
| § 5. Incorporeal things | 89-102 |
| Why they were numerous | 89-90 |
| Advowsons | 90-94 |
| Rights of Common | 94-97 |
| Rents, Annuities, and Corodies | 97-100 |
| Easements | 101-102 |
| § 6. The Power of Alienation | 102-110 |
| Restrictions in the interest of expectant heirs | 103-104 |
| Feudal restrictions | 104-109 |
| Mesne tenant and mesne lord. | 105-107 |
| The tenant in chief and the king | 107-109 |
| Alienation in mortmain | 109-110 |
| § 7. Conveyancing | 110-120 |
| Conveyancers and conveyancing precedents | 110-111 |
| Freehold interests | 111-118 |
| Feoffments with livery of seisin | 112-113 |
| Growth of written charters | 113-114 |
| Indentures and deeds poll | 114-115 |
| Releases, surrenders, exchanges, partitions, and grants | 115 |
| Growing importance of deeds | 115-116 |
| Fines | 116-118 |
| Recoveries | 118 |
| Copyholds | 118-119 |
| Leases for years | 120 |

CONTENTS

ix

| | |
|---|---------|
| § 8. Seisin and Possession | 121-131 |
| Place of this topic in the land law | 121 |
| Terminology | 121-122 |
| The modern conception of ownership and pos- session | 123-124 |
| The point of view of early law | 124-125 |
| Importance of seisin | 125 |
| Ownership is the better right to seisin | 125 |
| The position of the man seised | 125-126 |
| The position of the man disseised | 126 |
| The medieval theory of seisin | 126-127 |
| Modifications in the law | 127-128 |
| No abstract right of ownership as yet recognized | 128 |
| Applications of these principles to the relations of lord and tenant | 129 |
| Application of these principles to incorporeal things | 129-130 |
| § 9. Special Customs | 131-136 |
| Ancient Demesne | 131-133 |
| Gavelkind | 133-134 |
| The Borough Customs | 134-136 |
| § 10. General Conclusions | 136-139 |

CHAPTER II

THE SIXTEENTH AND EARLY SEVENTEENTH CENTURIES (1485-1660)

| | |
|--|---------|
| § 1. The Medieval Development of Uses and Trusts | 140-151 |
| Terminology | 140-141 |
| Origins | 141-142 |
| Development of in English law | 142-144 |
| Importance of uses and trusts of land | 144-145 |
| Refusal of the common law to recognize them and its results | 145-147 |
| Protection given by the court of Chancery | 147-150 |

| | |
|--|---------|
| The position of the feoffees to uses | 147-148 |
| The position of the cestui-qui use | 148 |
| Uses increase the powers of land-owners | 148-150 |
| Control by the Legislature | 150-151 |
| § 2. The Statutes of Uses and Wills | 151-161 |
| Importance of the statute of Uses | 152 |
| The political causes of the statute | 153-155 |
| Its immediate consequences | 155-158 |
| The statute of Wills and its effects | 158 |
| How far did the statute of Uses fulfil its objects? | 159-161 |
| The use upon a use | 160-161 |
| § 3. The Effects of these Statutes on the Land Law | 161-166 |
| Give elasticity to the land law | 161 |
| Increase in the powers of landowners | 161-162 |
| Need for a rule against perpetuities | 162-163 |
| A larger variety of interests in the land | 163-164 |
| New modes of conveyance | 164-165 |
| Advantages and disadvantages | 165 |
| Equitable trusts | 166 |
| § 4. Other Developments in the Land Law | 166-175 |
| Statutory changes | 167-169 |
| The action of ejectment | 169-175 |
| Its original sphere | 169-170 |
| Why it superseded the real actions | 170 |
| Its adaptation to the trial of the title to freehold | 170-173 |
| Limitations on its sphere | 173-174 |
| The effect of the Judicature Acts | 174-175 |

CHAPTER III

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE MODERN LAND
LAW (1660-1833)

| | |
|---|---------|
| § 1. Seisin, Possession, and Ownership | 176-188 |
| The Medieval rules and their modification | 177-179 |
| Modifications in the meaning of seisin | 177-178 |
| Survival of the medieval principle | 178-179 |

| | |
|--|---------|
| The rules originating in the actions of trespass and ejectment | 179-183 |
| Comparison with the law as to chattels | 179-180 |
| Nineteenth-century legislation | 180 |
| The principles of the modern law | 180-183 |
| Recognition of an abstract right of ownership | 182-183 |
| The application of these rules to equitable estates | 183-185 |
| Relations of equity to the modern common law | 183-184 |
| Tendency of these rules to approximate | 185 |
| The statutory changes of the nineteenth century | 185-188 |
| The constituent elements of the modern law | 186-187 |
| Assimilation of the law as to land and as to chattels | 187-188 |
| § 2. Future Interests | 188-203 |
| Various classes of | 188-189 |
| Reversions and remainders | 189 |
| Contingent remainders | 189-197 |
| Their validity | 190 |
| Rules as to their limitation | 190-193 |
| Their nature and incidents | 193-197 |
| Shifting and springing uses and executory devises | 197-200 |
| Nature of these interests | 197-198 |
| Conditions of their validity | 198-200 |
| Equitable interests | 200-203 |
| Their character | 200-201 |
| How they differed from the medieval use | 201-203 |
| Effect of these developments on the land law | 203 |
| § 3. Powers of Appointment | 204-217 |
| Power and property | 204-205 |
| Use made of these powers by the conveyancers | 205-206 |
| Origins and modes of operation | 206-212 |
| Common law powers | 206-207 |

| | |
|---|---------|
| Powers taking effect by means of the statute of Uses | 207-208 |
| Equitable powers | 208-210 |
| Modern statutory powers | 210-212 |
| Classification of powers | 212-217 |
| Powers simply collateral and others | 212-213 |
| General and special powers | 213-214 |
| Ordinary powers and powers in the nature of a trust | 214-216 |
| Nineteenth-century legislation | 216-217 |
| Effect of these developments on the land law | 217 |
| § 4. The Rules against Perpetuities | 217-230 |
| Why these rules were needed | 217-218 |
| Various attempts to solve the problem | 218-220 |
| The older rules | 220-223 |
| The modern rule. | 223-226 |
| How modified by the Legislature | 226-227 |
| The relation between the older rules and the modern rule | 227-230 |
| § 5. Landlord and Tenant | 230-255 |
| The wide ground covered by this relationship. | 230-231 |
| Varieties of tenancies and their incidents | 231-236 |
| The obligations of the lessor. | 236-238 |
| Covenants for title | 236-237 |
| Covenants to renew | 237-238 |
| The obligations of the lessee. | 238-246 |
| Rent | 238-241 |
| Waste | 241-243 |
| Covenants against assignment | 243 |
| Fixtures | 243-246 |
| Covenants running with the land and with the reversion | 246-255 |
| As between vendors and purchasers of fee simple estates | 246-249 |
| As between landlord and tenant | 250-253 |
| The rules of equity | 253-255 |

| | |
|--|---------|
| § 6. Mortgages | 255-264 |
| Sources of the modern law | 255 |
| The rules of equity | 256-261 |
| Clogs on the equity of redemption | 257-258 |
| Position of the mortgagee | 259-260 |
| Tacking and consolidation | 260-261 |
| The practice of the conveyancers | 261-263 |
| Powers to lease | 261 |
| Remedies of the mortgagee | 262-263 |
| Effects of the Property Acts | 263-264 |
| § 7. Incorporeal Things | 265-276 |
| The definition of an easement | 265 |
| Growth of the law of easements | 265-267 |
| The differentiation of easements from other rights | 267-272 |
| Easements and customary rights | 267-269 |
| Easements and licences | 269-271 |
| Easements and natural rights | 271-272 |
| The principles of the modern law | 272-276 |
| Extent of the right | 272 |
| Must be a permanent right | 272-273 |
| Number and variety of easements | 273-274 |
| Only a passive duty is imposed on the servient owner | 274 |
| How created expressly | 274-275 |
| Extinguishment | 275-276 |
| § 8. The Statutes of Limitation and Prescription. | 276-286 |
| The Real Property Limitation Acts | 276-279 |
| Mode of their operation. | 278-279 |
| Prescription | 279-286 |
| Application and definition of | 279 |
| The earlier view | 279-281 |
| The modern view | 281 |
| Nature of the user | 281-282 |
| Prescription at common law | 282 |

| | |
|---|---------|
| The fiction of a lost grant | 282-284 |
| The Prescription Act | 284-286 |
| Note on the cases of Tichborne v. Weir and In re Nisbet and Potts' Contract | 286-288 |
| § 9. Conveyancing | 288-300 |
| The medieval conveyances | 288-290 |
| The rise of the modern conveyances | 290-291 |
| The new forms of conveyance | 291-298 |
| Bargains and sales and covenants to stand seised | 292-293 |
| Bargain and sale for a term and release | 293-295 |
| The Devise | 295-298 |
| Its nature | 295-297 |
| Forms | 297-298 |
| The practice of conveyancers and the law | 299-300 |
| § 10. General Conclusions | 300-301 |

CHAPTER IV

THE ERA OF REFORM (1833-1925)

| | |
|--|---------|
| § 1. The Second Quarter of the Nineteenth Century | 302-310 |
| Why reform was necessary | 302-303 |
| The Commission on the Law of Real Property and its results | 303 |
| The influence of the landowners | 304 |
| The views of the Commissioners | 304-306 |
| Registration of conveyances | 306-308 |
| History of past attempts to effect this | 306-308 |
| Why they failed | 308 |
| The mistake made by the Commissioners and its effects | 308-310 |
| § 2. The Second Half of the Nineteenth Century | 310-318 |
| The changed point of view | 310-311 |
| Projects for the registration of titles or conveyances | 311-312 |

| | |
|---|---------|
| Proposals to simplify the law in order to make these projects workable | 312-314 |
| Effect of changed economic and political con- ditions | 314-315 |
| Maitland's paper on the law of real property. | 315 |
| Practical results of these various proposals . | 315-317 |
| Registers of charges on the land | 318 |
| § 3. The Genesis of the Property Acts | 318-324 |
| The effect of the Great War | 318-319 |
| Advocacy of changes in the substantive law . | 319-320 |
| Projects of registration postponed. . . . | 320-321 |
| The enactment of the Property Acts . . . | 321-322 |
| The relation of their contents to earlier legisla- tion and legislative projects | 322-324 |
| Conclusion | 324-327 |
| Index | 329-339 |