

Ulrich Rathgeber

Healing through love

Heal yourself and others with Anahata Healing

© 2022 Ulrich Rathgeber

Author: Ulrich Rathgeber

Cover Design: Julian Rathgeber, Teodora Buseva

ISBN Softcover: 978-3-347-45716-4

ISBN Hardcover: 978-3-347-45717-1

ISBN E-Book: 978-3-347-45718-8

ISBN Large Print: 978-3-347-45719-5

Printed and distributed on behalf of the author:
tredition GmbH, Halenreie 40-44, 22359 Hamburg, Germany.

This work, including its parts, is protected by copyright. The author is responsible for the contents. Any exploitation is prohibited without his consent. Publication and distribution are carried out on behalf of the author, who can be contacted at: tredition GmbH, Department "Imprint Service", Halenreie 40-44, 22359 Hamburg, Germany.

For Julian, Lena and Jana,
Margrit, Teodora and Anne:
I love you very much.

Content

Part One

General basics

What are we?	13
The energy field	17
About divine love	21
About love itself	23
Your energy bodies.....	25
Your etheric body.....	27
Your astral body	28
Your mental body and causal body	29
Your higher spiritual bodies.....	29
The meaning of this knowledge	31
Different types of energy.....	32
The Spiritual Worlds
The Ascended Masters	35
Angels and Archangels.....	37
Further sources of power from the Spiritual Worlds	38

Part Two

Basics of healing

What is healing?	43
The development of diseases.....	46
The process of healing.....	48
The permanence of healing	49

Healing and Karma	50
Healing and time
What is time?	53
The healing of the past.....	53
The healing of “past” lives.....	56
The healing of the future.....	57
Gaining presence in the present	59
Healing and Nature
Healing through nature experience	61
Healing through animals	62
Healing through silence
Listening to the silence	65
The way into silence	66
Talk is silver, silence is gold.....	67
Silence retreats	68
Healing through words
Words are energy	71
The effect of words	72
The Reverse Speech	73
Special forms of energetic communication	75
Healing versus disease	79

Part Three

The Healing System of Anahata Healing

The philosophy of Anahata Healing	83
The three healing methods	87
Anahata Angel Light
The origin.....	89
The initiation.....	90

Preparations for a treatment	91
The course of a treatment	92
How the angels work.....	95
Experiences with angels	95
Experiences with clients	99
What such treatments can do.....	100
Treatments from several healers at the same time	102
Group treatments	103
Remote treatments.....	103
Self treatments.....	105
Anahata Spirit Light
The origin	107
The method.....	107
The initiation	108
Preparations for a treatment	109
The course of a treatment	110
Experiences during treatments	111
What such treatments can do.....	112
Anahata Energy	115
The origin	117
The method.....	118
The course of a treatment	120
How the energy works.....	121
Experiences during treatments	123
What such treatments can do.....	124
Treatments of animals	133
Remote treatments.....	137
Example of group remote healing: Case Anna.....	142
The structure of the healing system	145
Epilogue	147

Part One

General basics

What are we?

People have always wondered about the nature of reality, and for a long time all material things in our world, including our bodies, were considered massive and completely separate from each other. Spiritual energy was something completely different from solid matter in this material worldview, and since it was impossible to imagine an effect of intangible spiritual energy on something material, spiritual healings were considered either as miracles or as the work of the devil, and healers were treated accordingly.

When the advancement of science made it possible to observe the atoms, it was realized that our physical bodies are actually almost empty and contain only tiny atoms. So from then on, atoms were considered to be the actual solid matter, tiny building blocks that make up all things in our world. Even when one could later look inside the atoms and see that they too were in reality almost empty except for even tinier particles called atomic nuclei, this did not change much – the modular understanding of reality remained largely the same, only that the material building blocks were now considered even smaller than before.

The material world view, in which everything is separated from each other, was still present at this point; it had only become more refined. For however small the material particles that made up our physical bodies might be, matter was still matter and spiritual energy was something quite different. Spirit and matter still seemed to be separated from each other even in this expanded view and therefore had little influence on each other.

With the technical progress, however, the development of science continued to advance, and finally quantum physics brought groundbreaking insights that shook the old material world view from the bottom up: It was discovered that the subatomic particles that make up our world in reality had nothing to do with matter as we had imagined it until then!

On the one hand, these particles are not constantly present, but exist and disappear in rapid succession, and nobody knows where they are when they are not in our universe. On the other hand, they cannot be observed without this observation alone causing changes in them! The mental intention of the observer already influences their behavior.

This discovery revolutionized our world view in many ways: That these particles react to the mental intent of their observer means that they are no small clumps of dead matter, but spiritual energy. And they are not just some abstract particles in a laboratory that have nothing to do with our lives, but they are literally everything that surrounds us, including our own bodies! So there are no material building blocks as we used to imagine – our essence is spiritual energy and everything around us is also made of it. We are in fact energy beings!

So in reality there is no separation between spirit and matter, simply because there is no matter that could be separated from spiritual energy – what we thought was matter is in reality also energy, only in condensed form. Since everything is energy, every interaction between two beings is of course also an exchange of energy. And already the principle of spiritual healing can be easily understood: One energy being sends energy into another energy being and this energy causes something there. Neither miracles nor devil's work, but a very simple and natural process!

The fact that something cannot be observed at the quantum level without already changing it means that there is no real separation between the observer and the observed – perhaps the greatest scientific discovery of all time! It is the scientific proof that in our world everything is in reality connected. Everything is a single common energy field!

The energies that make up all of us and our environment are as little separated from each other as water in one part of the ocean is separated from the water in the next part. The sages and mystics have been telling us this for thousands of years, and now science finally confirms it:

In fact, we are all one.

The energy field

We are all part of this one all-encompassing energy field, of which everything consists and in which all life takes place. Our consciousness identifies itself with a certain part of the energy of this great pool, and we see this selected part of the energy as ourselves and our physical body.

So what is this energy field? It is the whole that contains everything that exists and yet is much more. We can call it whatever we want: United Quantum Field, All That Is, Universe, Silence, Life, Divine Love, Divine Source, Being or God. Although the term God may be negatively biased by church influences for some readers, I would like to use it here because it fits here best for my feeling.

Many years ago, on a walk without any external trigger, I came for a few hours into the most extraordinary and at the same time most ecstatic state of consciousness I have ever experienced. I consciously experienced the energy field that fills and connects us all, and I saw and felt the energy everywhere and in everything! In all people and things there was divine essence, like a golden light shimmering easily through all forms. I was able to perceive the absolute perfection of creation, in which everything is connected with everything else and therefore every seemingly unimportant little thing is equally important and equally necessary for the whole.

At first, everything seemed to me to be a gigantic living clockwork in which billions of small and large cogs interlocked: For the whole to work, each of its parts is needed, no matter how big or small it may be. Some parts are designed to rotate with each other and others to rotate against each other, but also the opposing running cogs are necessary for the whole to work. Some directions of rotation change, others always remain the same, and that is exactly as it should be.

The whole movement runs absolutely perfectly and no part of it can ever interfere with it, because even if he should try to do so, this change in his direction of rotation is not a disturbance, but in turn a necessary and important part of the whole process.¹

Next, I had the impression of a huge stage with billions of actors performing a play in which everyone plays their part perfectly. I realized that for this play, every detail, no matter how small, is absolutely important, that these very pedestrians are walking along that very street, talking about that very subject, because that very moment that cyclist is passing by them, picking up a very specific sentence from them, and so on... The perfection of the whole is that everything fits together perfectly, and its liveliness is that everything is constantly changing. No one can ever disturb the perfection of this divine performance in any way, because everything he does is again exactly the perfect representation of his role in it. Yet no one is a puppet, who has a fixed role to play, but anyone can change his role at any time at will and thus influence all other roles and the entire performance, which is what makes it so vivid.² As individuals, therefore, we do have free will within a given framework of possibilities.

¹ But please do not interpret my impression of the perfect clockwork as something mechanical – every cog in it has the freedom to choose all directions of rotation on its own level and thus influences all other cogs. The perfection of the clockwork is not disturbed by this, it only changes constantly the form through which its perfection is expressed, and this is what makes it so lively.

² It's a bit like improvisational theater, where the content of the piece is constantly changing...

On this level of consciousness, I realized that our mere existence is in reality absolute paradise: we always live in divine perfection and can never fall out of it, even though we usually cannot consciously perceive it, unfortunately.

We have only apparently left paradise.

