

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Contributors	ix
Introduction Agnieszka Gutthy	1
Part I: Russian Writers in Exile: Memory, Language, and Art	5
1. Twentieth Century Russian Literature in Exile Mabel Greta Velis Blinova	7
2. Language and Memory in Nabokov's "Revolution" Kristin Reed	21
3. Andrei Sinyavsky, Wisdom and Exile Carolyn Kraus	33
4. Catcher in the Rye: Georgy Efron's Tashkent Exile Olga Zaslavsky	41
Part II: Polish Messianism and Anti-Sentimentality	51
5. Polish Literature in the Great Emigration of 1830: Adam Mickiewicz, Juliusz Słowacki, and Zygmunt Krasiński Fernando Presa González	53
6. Living on the Margins and Loving It: Gombrowicz and Exile Klara Lutsky	73
7. Still Life: The Anti-Nostalgia of Adam Zagajewski Karen Bishop	89

Part III: The Mosaic of Kundera	103
8. Kundera's Reception in the West Klara Lutsky	105
9. Vor(text)ual Time: The Agency of Being-in-Time and Milan Kundera's The Unbearable Lightness of Being Susanlynne Beckwith	121
Part IV: Post-Yugoslav Exile: Disjunctive Memory and Unhealed Wounds	137
10. Open Wounds, the Phenomenology of Exile and the Management of Pain: Dubravka Ugrešić's The Ministry of Pain Vedrana Velickovic	139
11. Grief Can Only Be Written in One's Mother Tongue: Exile and Identity in the Work of David Albahari Tatjana Aleksić	155
Part V: Doubly Damned: Klaus Mann and Norman Manea	175
12. Klaus Mann: The Teufelskind Doubly Exiled Timothy Nixon	177
13. Inescapable Colonization: Norman Manea's Eternal Exile Mihai Mîndra	193
Bibliography	211
Index of Poets and Writers	223