

our children. our responsibilities

Saving the Youth
We Are Losing to Gangs

CHRISTOPHER ANNE ROBINSON-EASLEY

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
Preface	ix
Introduction	1
Part One: The Context, Issues, and Mindset
Chapter 1. My Lens, Perspectives and Context: Yet a Collective Set of Challenges	11
Chapter 2. Owning the Problem: The Bigger Picture Beyond the Context of Our Personal Walls	33
Chapter 3. Linkages to Youth Violence: Twenty-First-Century Challenges in the African American Community	41
Chapter 4. Losing this Battle Is Not an Option: What the Real Loss of Our Children Means to the African American Community	67
Part Two: A Historical Look at My 1999 Results
Chapter 5. The Issues from the Lens of a Child	75
Chapter 6. Keeping It Real: If It Is Going to Change, and Our Youth Are to Be Saved, We Have to Do It	87

Chapter 7. Breaking the Chains of Our Spiritual, Mental and Physical Fatigue: The Role of Appreciative Inquiry in the Fight to Save Our Youth	101
Part Three: A 2011 Perspective
Chapter 8. The Role of Appreciative Inquiry in the Fight to Save Our Youth	123
Chapter 9. Critical Foundations and Constructs of Change	137
Chapter 10. The Model for Change	163
Part Four: Final Thoughts
Chapter 11. Celebrating Our Success: Appreciating Our Efforts, Youth, and Future	193
Chapter 12. The Global Application of This Model	197
Chapter 13. Reflections and Concluding Comments	201
Notes	207
Bibliography	209
Index	217