

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Problem Statement	6
1.2	Study Approach	11
1.2.1	Motivation and Rationale for the Study	11
1.2.2	Theoretical Background	12
1.2.3	Methodological approach / proceeding of the empirical study	14
1.2.4	Guiding Research Questions and Hypotheses	16
1.3	Organization of the Study	19
Part I	CSR as a Governance Tool in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain
2	The Evolution of CSR as “a Concept for All”	23
2.1	CSR—the Genesis of an Ambivalent Concept	25
2.2	A Political Social Responsibility of Business?	29
2.3	Forms and Institutional Embeddedness of CSR	35
2.4	Concluding Thoughts on CSR as a Developmental Tool	41
3	Consent and Control: A Conceptual Framework for the Study of CSR in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	45
3.1	Understanding Organization and Control of Global Value Chains—the Global Value Chain Analysis Approach	48
3.1.1	The Evolution of Global Value Chain Analysis—the Ideological Journey of a Research Concept	49
3.1.2	Global Value Chain Analysis as a Methodical Framework	53

3.1.3	Limitations of the Industrial Governance Understanding in Global Value Chain Analysis	55
3.2	CSR as a Consent Strategy—Neo-Gramscian Perspectives on Global Governance	57
3.2.1	Antonio Gramsci's Concept of Cultural Hegemony	58
3.2.2	Neo-Gramscian Approaches to International Political Economy	62
3.2.3	CSR, Trasformismo, and the Manufacture of Consent in Global Value Chains	72
3.3	Governing through CSR—Elements of the Consent and Control Framework	74
4	CSR in a Dynamic Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	79
4.1	Historical and Geographic Features of the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	80
4.2	Main Activities within the Production Segments	83
4.2.1	Local Level: Cocoa Production and Linked Activities	85
4.2.2	National Level: Cocoa Marketing	88
4.2.3	Global Level: From Transformation to Retailing	89
4.3	The Hybridization of Governance in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	92
4.4	Key Challenges to Achieve Sustainability in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	100
4.4.1	Environmental Pillar: Focus on Deforestation and Biodiversity Degradation	100
4.4.2	Economic Pillar: Focus on Value Distribution and Power Concentration in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	103
4.4.3	Social Pillar: Focus on Child Labor	108
4.5	CSR as a Response to Sustainability Deficiencies in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	111
Part II	CSR and Transformations in Ghana's Cocoa Sector as Part of Governance Dynamics in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain
5	The Cocoa Sector in Ghana—a Frontier at its Limits?	119
5.1	Ghana's Cocoa Frontier as a Driver of Rural Structural Change	121

5.2	The Institutional Setting of the Cocoa Sector in Ghana	124
5.2.1	A Historical Snap of the Institutional Environment and Sector Reforms	125
5.2.2	Today's Institutional Set-up and Stakeholder Positions	130
5.2.3	The Two main Segments in the Sector: Production and Marketing	136
5.3	Main Challenges to Establish Sustainability of Ghana's Last Cocoa Frontier	138
5.4	Main Sector Strategies to Respond to Sustainability Challenges	142
5.4.1	Public Sector Strategies	142
5.4.2	Farmers' Self-organization and NGOs' Support	144
5.4.3	Industry Interventions: CSR as a Response to Challenges on Ghana's Last Cocoa Frontier	146
6	Field Work Design and Procedures	151
6.1	Research Approach	152
6.2	Guiding Model for the Empirical Assessment of CSR-induced Transformations in the Global Cocoa-Chocolate Chain	154
6.3	Field Work Strategy: Triangulation of Qualitative Research Tools	163
6.3.1	Study of Sector Constellation and Existing CSR Interventions in Ghana's Cocoa Industry	164
6.3.2	Farmers Interviews on Experiences with the Selected Sustainability Intervention	165
6.4	Data Processing and Analysis	171
6.5	Characteristics of the Research Area and Socio-demographics of Interview Partners	172
7	CSR in Practice: Assessing the Implementation of one Cocoa Sustainability Program in Ghana	183
7.1	The Implementation: Modus Operandi of the Studied Project	184
7.1.1	Project Partners	184
7.1.2	The Implementation Process	190
7.2	Project Experiences from Different Perspectives	205
7.2.1	The Experiences of the Implementers	205

7.2.2	Farmers' Perceptions on the Project and their Participation in it	211
7.2.3	COCOBOD's Views on Private Sector-led Sustainability Interventions in the Sector	220
7.3	Private Sustainability Interventions and Institutional Transformations in Ghana's Cocoa Sector	226
7.3.1	New Forms of Sector Organization	226
7.3.2	New Patterns of Sector Cooperation	228
7.3.3	Shifting Marketing Relations	229
8	Transnational CSR as a Governance Tool and Local Development in the Global South	233
8.1	Cocoa Sustainability Certification through the Lenses of the Consent and Control Framework	234
8.1.1	Dimensions of the Transformative Process	234
8.1.2	Outcomes of Private Governmental Aspirations through CSR	239
8.2	TNC-driven Sustainability Certification and Local Development Opportunities	244
8.2.1	Regulatory Capacities at Risk	244
8.2.2	Upgrading Opportunities Reduced	246
8.2.3	No Fairness in a Certified Cocoa Bean	247
8.2.4	Shortcomings in Underlying Developmental Assumptions	249
8.3	Outlook: A Multiple-Scale Effort to Achieve Cocoa Sustainability and Overcome Cocoa Producers' Poverty	253
8.3.1	Requirements at the International Level	254
8.3.2	The Need for Increased National Efforts	256
8.3.3	The Gains of Local Self-Organization	259
9	Conclusions	261
9.1	Unpacking Ambitions, Tools and Effects of Transnational CSR	262
9.2	The Challenge to Open the Box—and How to Look in it	267
9.3	Possible Future Forms of CSR and Implications for Research and Practice	268
	References	271