1. Predicate formation	1
1.0. Introduction	1
1.1. The nature of predicate formation rules: an example	3
1.2. A typology of predicate formation rules	5
1.2.0. Introduction	5
1.2.1. The form of the predicate	6
1.2.2. The type of the predicate	7
1.2.3. The quantitative valency	8
1.2.3.1. Valency extension	8
1.2.3.2. Valency reduction	9
1.2.4. The qualitative valency	15
1.2.4.1. Semantic functions	15
1.2.4.2. Selection restrictions	17
1.3. Explanatory notes on predicate formation	18
1.4. The expression of the output predicate	21
1.5. Conclusion	22
2. Verbal restrictors 1: general properties	23
2.0. Introduction	23
2.1. Participant identification	24
2.2. Some terminological issues	25
2.3. Verbal restrictors	28
2.3.1. Verbal restrictors are extended predications	28
2.3.2. Verbal restrictors are “open” predications	29
2.3.3. Anaphorical relations	30
2.3.4. Selection restrictions	31
2.3.5. Stacking of verbal restrictors	32
2.3.5.0. Introduction	32
2.3.5.1. Stacking in English	33
2.3.5.2. Stacking in Luganda	34
2.3.5.3. Incorporating restrictions on stacking in FG	36

2.4.	Non-restrictive usage of verbal restrictors	38
2.4.1.	Differences between restrictors and non-restrictors	39
2.4.2.	The semantic status of non-restrictors	41
2.4.3.	Non-restrictors and independent clauses	42
2.4.4.	The FG analysis of non-restrictors	44
3.	Verbal restrictors 2: types	45
3.0.	Introduction	45
3.1.	Post-nominal verbal restrictors	47
3.1.0.	Introduction	47
3.1.1.	The formal expression of relative clauses	48
3.1.2.	On pronominal expression of the relativized variable	51
3.1.3.	Relative pronouns	54
3.2.	Prenominal verbal restrictors	55
3.2.1.	Participial restrictors	55
3.2.2.	Nominalized restrictors	57
3.2.3.	Closed predications as restrictors	58
3.2.4.	Appositive verbal restrictors	63
3.3.	Circumnominal verbal restrictors	65
3.4.	Correlative relative constructions	68
4.	Verbal restrictors 3: explanations	71
4.0.	Introduction	71
4.1.	On the (non-)universality of verbal restrictors	72
4.2.	Prefield versus Postfield	74
4.3.	Scenarios for the creation of verbal restrictors	76
4.3.1.	From parataxis to verbal restrictor	77
4.3.2.	From embedded question to verbal restrictor	79
4.3.3.	From circumstantial satellite to verbal restrictor	82
4.3.3.0.	Introduction	82
4.3.3.1.	Circumstantial satellites	83
4.3.3.2.	Circumstantials in Orientation position	85
4.4.	Conclusion	92
5.	Embedded constructions 1: semantic parameters	93
5.0.	Introduction	93
5.1.	Clausal terms	96

5.1.1.	Direct speech	96
5.1.2.	Indirect speech	98
5.1.3.	Indirect speech complements have their own illocutions	100
5.1.4.	Difference between direct and indirect speech	102
5.1.5.	Not all elements can be converted into indirect speech	103
5.2.	Propositional terms	106
5.2.1.	Types of matrix predicates	106
5.2.2.	Factivity	108
5.3.	Predicational terms	110
5.3.1.	Types of matrix predicates	110
5.3.2.	Implicatives	114
5.4.	Differences between types of embedded construction	116
5.4.1.	Believe versus persuade versus force	116
5.4.2.	Japanese complementizers	117
6.	Embedded constructions 2: functional and formal parameters	121
6.0.	Introduction	121
6.1.	Functional parameters	121
6.1.1.	Semantic functions	121
6.1.2.	Perspectival functions	123
6.1.3.	Pragmatic functions	123
6.2.	Formal parameters	125
6.2.1.	The position of the embedded construction in the matrix domain	126
6.2.2.	Formal subordination markers	135
6.2.3.	Internal constituent ordering within the embedded construction	138
6.2.4.	Finite or non-finite realization of the embedded predicate	138
6.2.5.	Mood	140
7.	Embedded constructions 3: types	143
7.0.	Introduction	143
7.1.	Finite embedded constructions: subordinate clauses	144
7.2.	Non-finite embedded constructions	145
7.2.1.	Infinitival constructions	145
7.2.1.1.	Closed and open infinitival constructions	147
7.2.1.2.	Functions of infinitival constructions	150

7.2.1.3.	Infinitivals as complements to adjectives ..	152
7.2.2.	Participial constructions	154
7.2.3.	Nominalizations	157
7.2.3.1.	The possessive expression of arguments ..	160
7.2.3.2.	A cross-linguistic hierarchy of nominalization types	162
7.2.3.3.	The treatment of nominalizations in FG ...	164
8.	Polarity distinctions	169
8.0.	Introduction	169
8.1.	Negation: operator or satellite?	170
8.2.	Negation and Focus	171
8.3.	Illocutionary negation	172
8.4.	Propositional negation	174
8.5.	Predicational negation	177
8.6.	Negation at the predicate level	178
8.6.0.	Introduction	178
8.6.1.	Complementary formation	178
8.6.2.	Contrary formation	179
8.6.3.	Litotes	179
8.7.	Term negation or zero quantification	180
8.8.	Term negation versus predication negation	183
8.8.1.	Two strategies for talking about nothing	183
8.8.2.	Typological distribution	184
9.	Coordination	189
9.0.	Introduction	189
9.1.	Coordination defined	189
9.2.	Ways of describing coordinate constructions	193
9.3.	Simple coordination	196
9.3.1.	Coordination of sentences and clauses	196
9.3.2.	Coordination of propositions and predications	200
9.3.3.	Coordination of terms	201
9.3.4.	Coordination of predicates	203
9.3.5.	Coordination of or inside restrictors	205
9.3.6.	Coordination of operators and functions	207
9.4.	Multiple coordination	209
9.5.	Simultaneous coordination	212

10. Anaphora	215
10.0. Introduction	215
10.1. Definitions	215
10.2. Accessibility	218
10.3. Expression	219
10.3.0. Introduction	219
10.3.1. Pragmatic factors	220
10.3.2. Types of entities	223
10.3.2.0. Introduction	223
10.3.2.1. Anaphorical reference to properties and relations	224
10.3.2.2. Anaphorical reference to States of Affairs	226
10.3.2.3. Anaphorical reference to Possible Facts	227
10.3.2.4. Anaphorical reference to Speech Acts	228
10.3.2.5. Conclusion	228
11. The illocutionary layer	229
11.0. Introduction	229
11.1. The status of “illocution”	230
11.2. Explicit and implicit performatives	232
11.2.1. Explicit performatives	232
11.2.2. Implicit performatives	234
11.3. Sentence types as carriers of basic illocutions	236
11.4. Illocutionary operators	239
11.5. Illocutionary conversion	240
11.5.1. Derived illocutions	240
11.5.2. Types of grammatical conversion	242
11.5.3. Types of illocutionary converters	245
11.5.4. The borderline between grammatical and pragmatic conversion	249
11.5.5. Embedded converted illocutions	250
11.5.6. Indirect speech acts	251
11.6. Explicit performatives again	252
11.7. Conclusion	254
12. Interrogative clauses	257
12.0. Introduction	257
12.1. The illocutionary force of questions	258
12.2. Different types of interrogative construction	260

12.3. Q-word questions	263
12.3.1. The nature of Q-word questions	263
12.3.2. The operators Int and Q	265
12.3.3. Types of Q-constituents	267
12.3.4. The representation of Q-constituents	269
12.3.5. Accessibility to Q	270
12.3.5.1. Questioning of terms	271
12.3.5.2. Questioning of constituents within terms ..	271
12.3.5.3. On questioning the predicate	274
12.4. The placement of Q-constituents	276
12.4.1. Q-Pattern versus Q-Focus	280
12.4.2. A question about pronoun retention	283
12.4.3. The distribution of Q-Pattern and Q-Focus	284
12.5. Multiple Q-word questions	286
13. Focus constructions: basic patterns	291
13.0. Introduction	291
13.1. A note on terminology	291
13.2. The prototypical Cleft construction	293
13.2.1. The prototypical Cleft in FG	295
13.2.2. Dummy head nouns	296
13.2.3. On expressing Cleft constructions	298
13.2.4. Selection restrictions	300
13.2.5. The form of Focus term and agreement patterns in the Cleft construction	302
13.2.6. Typological predictions	307
13.3. Focus constructions with adpositional predicates	309
14. Predicate focus; cleft interrogatives; demarking of Focus constructions	313
14.0. Introduction	313
14.1. Focusing on the predicate	313
14.2. Interrogative Focus constructions	318
14.3. Demarking processes	325
14.3.1. Demarking of Focus constructions	325
14.3.2. Demarking of pragmatically marked construction types	329

15. Discrepancies between underlying clause structure and surface
expression	331
15.0. Introduction	331
15.1. Types of discrepancies	332
15.2. Formal discrepancy	333
15.2.1. Non-nominative first arguments or Subjects	333
15.2.2. Relative attraction	335
15.3. Positional discrepancy	339
15.3.1. Types of displacement	339
15.3.2. On explaining displacement	341
15.4. Formal and positional discrepancy	342
15.5. On "Raising"	344
15.5.1. Forms of Raising	344
15.5.2. Constraints on Raising	346
15.3.3. The pragmatic motivation of Raising	349
15.6. Other forms of structural discrepancy	351
15.6.1. First-order expression designates second-order entity	351
15.6.2. Second-order expression designates first-order entity	355
16. Accessibility	357
16.0. Introduction	357
16.1. Operations	358
16.2. Intrinsic constraints	359
16.3. Hierarchical constraints	361
16.4. Functional constraints	365
16.4.0. Introduction	365
16.4.1. Semantic and Syntactic Functions	366
16.4.1.1. Keenan and Comrie's Accessibility Hierarchy	366
16.4.1.2. Reconsidering the Accessibility Hierarchy	368
16.4.1.3. Conclusion	375
16.4.2. Pragmatic Functions	376
16.5. Concluding remarks	377
17. Extra-clausal constituents	379
17.0. Introduction	379
17.1. On defining ECCs	380

18.6. Discourse coherence	433
18.6.0. Introduction	433
18.6.1. Frames as a source of coherence	433
18.6.2. Iconic sequencing	435
18.6.3. Topical continuity	436
18.6.4. Focality	438
18.6.5. Tail-Head Linking	438
18.6.6. Connectors	440
18.7. Conclusion	441
