

CONTENTS

PREFACE	7
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	9
CONTENTS	11
LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	17
INTRODUCTION	19
1. Objective	19
2. The focus of previous studies	21
3. Language and Orthography	25
CHAPTER ONE
Approach and Perspectives	27
1.1. Native Anthropology	27
1.2. An Anthropological Tradition	33
1.2.1. Systems of Bricolage	33
1.2.2. The Body and its Habitus	35
1.3. Space and its Categories	39
1.3.2. Defined Loci as Conceptual Categories	42
CHAPTER TWO
Society Observed	47
2.1. Common Features	48
2.1.1. The Ethnic Feature	49
2.1.2. The Socio-political Feature	55
2.2. Fields of Study	59
2.2.1. Peoples and Diversity	59
2.2.2. Dagaraland	62
2.3. Participant Observation and the Social Fields	63
2.3.1. In the Field of Manhood	64
2.3.2. In the Field of Womanhood	66
2.3.3. In the Field of Childhood	68
2.4. Participant Observation and Anthropological Analysis	70

CHAPTER THREE
Order of Relations: Space, Time and Cosmogony	73
3.1. The Cosmos	73
3.2. A Domain of Personified Characters	76
3.2.1. The Character of Rain (Sàà)	77
3.2.2. The Character of Sun	79
3.2.3. The Feature of the Moon	81
3.2.4. The Structure of the Cosmic House	84
3.3. The Environment	85
3.3.1. Features of Institutional Importance	86
3.3.2. Institutional Pattern of the Cosmic Order	90
3.4. The Human Habitat	96
3.4.1. The House: a Two-tiered System	98
3.4.2. Roof-level and Pattern of Positioning	99
3.4.3. The Ground-level and Public Positions	102
3.5. Defining Time	109
3.5.1. Time in Terms of Social Relation	111
3.5.2. Seasonal Time and Binding Relations	113
3.5.3. The Order of Days and the Order of Events	115
PLATES: 1-12	121
CHAPTER FOUR
House-Based Structure	127
4.1 The House-based Model	129
4.2. Dagara Mode of Settlement	131
4.2.1. The Myth	131
4.2.2. A History	133
4.2.3. The Observed	135
4.3. Social Structure of the House	137
4.3.1. House Institutions and Domestic Groups	140
4.3.2. The Ritual Room	142
4.3.3. The Mother's Kitchen	143
4.3.4. The Long Common Room	145
4.4. Institutional Structure of the Village Settlement	147
4.4.1. The Institution of the Midden	150
4.4.2. The Village Market	150
4.4.3. The Institution of the Earth	152
4.4.4. The Institution of Land	153
4.5. Social Integration in the Village Settlement	154
4.5.1. Selective Integration	155

4.5.2. Institutions for Ouside Integration	157
4.6. House-Based System and the Structure of Contra position	158
CHAPTER FIVE
Identity and the Imaginary Social Pattern	161
5.1. Imaginary Communities	163
5.2.1. A List of Common House Names	164
5.3. Pattern of House Connections	165
5.3.1. The Imaginary Social Origin	168
5.3.2. Imaginary Lines of Segmentation	169
5.3.4. Groups in Collaboration and Reciprocity	171
5.4. Imaginary Institutions	175
5.3.1. The Foundational Institutions	176
5.3.2. Custodianship	179
5.3.3. Imaginary Institutional Pattern	181
5.5. Ritual and Ceremonial Practice	183
5.5. Imaginary Pattern of Farming	187
5.5.1. Meaning of Farming	187
5.5.2. Method of Farming	188
5.6. Imaginary Pattern of Migratory Movement	192
5.7. The View on Organised Conflict	195
5.8. Viewing the House as a Social and Cultural System	197
CHAPTER SIX
Gender Categories and Social Relations	199
6.1. Populations and Social Categories	199
6.1.2. The Myth of Human Divisions	201
6.2. Elaboration of a Social Ideology	202
6.2.1. Gender Categories	203
6.2.2. Mixed Groups	204
6.2.3. Unique Groups	205
6.2.4. The Population	206
6.3. The Social and Political Context	208
6.3.1. Equality and Contra position	208
6.3.2. Distinction and Inequality	210
6.4. Kin-based Groups and Ideology	212
6.4.1. Gender and Marriage Expressed in Kinship Terms	212
6.4.2. Descent Structure and Kin Relations	214
6.5. Economic View on Social Groups	216
6.5.1. Differentiation in Skills and Modes of Production	217
6.5.2. The Idea of Money and Exchange	219

6.5.3. Marriage Transaction	220
6.5.4. The Moral Economy	223
CHAPTER SEVEN
The Practice of Hoe-farming	227
7.1. The Structure of Farming Fields	228
7.2. Farming in the House Environment	229
7.2.1. The Midden	229
7.2.2. The Farm of the Settlement	230
7.2.3. The Farm Beyond the Settlement	232
7.2.4. The Refuse Dump and the Dug-Out Pit	233
7.2.5. The Farm of Hill Side and the Valley	236
7.3. The Meaning and Use of Tools	238
7.3.1. Tools as Cues	238
7.3.2. Hand made Tools	243
7.3.3 Composite Tools	246
7.4. Hoe-Labour and Social Exchange	249
7.4.1. Restricted and Balanced Exchange	249
7.4.2. Open and Unbalanced Exchange	254
7.4.3. Parallel Non-reciprocal Exchange	255
7.4.4. Indirect Exchange	256
7.4.5. Farming for the Maternal Uncle	257
7.5. Farming and Public Relations	258
CHAPTER EIGHT
Hoe-Farming in Terms of Change and Migration	261
8.1. Perceptions on Change	261
8.2. The Case of Logo Bathelomeuw	262
8.2.1. The Set Pattern in the Homestead	263
8.2.2. Interpretation of the Set Pattern	264
8.2.3. A Model of Fission and Separation	266
8.3. Changing the Environment of the Settlement	268
8.3.1. Reproducing the Imaginary Structure	268
8.3.2. The House Community in Place	270
8.3.3. The House Community as a Social Unit	272
8.4. Disruption of Relational Patterns	273
8.4.1. The Flux and Whirlpool of Tradition	274
8.4.2. Developing a Social Constitution	282
8.5. Continuity and Transformations	290
8.5.1. The Ritual of Divination and the Control of Power	291

CONCLUSION
Dagara Hoe-farming: A Way of Knowing How to Relate	295
PLATES : 13-20	301
REFERENCES	305
GLOSSARY	313