

Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Why Banks are so Important: The Economic and Sociological View	1
1.2	The Sociology of Banking and the Historical Development of the Banking Sector	3
1.3	The Selection of Case and Time	7
1.4	General Trends	9
1.5	Three Pivotal Periods	12
1.6	The Plan of the Book	14
2	Ideas, Interests, Institutions and Banking Revolutions	19
2.1	Ideas, Interests and Institutions	21
2.1.1	Ideas: In Sociology, Economics and Political Science	22
2.1.2	Interests: In Sociology, Economics and Political Science	39
2.1.3	The Relation Between Ideas and Interests	48
2.1.4	The Relation Between Ideas, Interests and Institutions	50
2.2	Three Main Orders: Political, Economic and Cultural	55
2.2.1	The Political, Economic and Cultural Order	56
2.2.2	The Interdependence of the Three Orders	60
2.2.3	Stability and Change of the Three Orders	62
3	Italian Financial Capitalism: The Birth of Modern Banking	67
3.1	Ideal Constrains: Usury Laws	68
3.2	From Merchant to Financial Capitalism	70
3.2.1	Shifting Politics and the Rise of Public Debt Capitalism	72
3.2.2	Changing Ideas: New Perspectives on Interests	76
3.3	The Rise of Modern Banks	79
3.3.1	The Foundation of the State Lender Associations	79
3.3.2	Early Public Banks	81
3.3.3	Early Cooperative Banks	83
3.4	The Regulation of Medieval Italian Banks	84
3.5	Conclusion	85

3.6	The Heritage from Medieval Banking	87
4	Absolutism, Mercantilism and Banking Revolutions	91
4.1	The Rise of Hanseatic Banks	91
4.2	The Rise of Modern Banking	93
4.2.1	Mercantilism: The New Leading Economic Idea	93
4.2.2	The Rise of Merchants and Bankers	103
4.2.3	Political Coalitions	106
4.2.4	The Rise of Private, Public, and Non-profit Banks	111
4.3	Conclusion	136
4.4	The Heritage of Early European Banking	138
5	The Development of the European Banking Sector as We Know It	143
5.1	The Cultural Order of the 19th Century	149
5.1.1	The End of Mercantilism as the Leading Idea	151
5.1.2	The Rise of (Economic) Liberalism and Nationalism	154
5.1.3	The Anti-liberal Turn on the European Continent	158
5.1.4	Intensifying Imperialism	168
5.1.5	Quantity Theory of Money and New Keynesian Money Theories	173
5.2	The Rise of the English Banking System	210
5.2.1	The Time of Old Toryism	213
5.2.2	The Time of the Liberal Hegemony	216
5.2.3	Changing Money and Banking Laws	221
5.2.4	The Intensification of Imperialism	232
5.2.5	British Private Banks: From the Late 18th Century to World War I	236
5.3	The Rise of French Banking	246
5.3.1	Saint-Simonianism and Imperialism: Pivotal Ideas for French Banking	246
5.3.2	Bourbon Restoration: The Conservative Backlash	254
5.3.3	July Monarchy: 'Bankers Reign'	256
5.3.4	Napoleon III and the Banking Revolution	260
5.3.5	The Third Republic: The Rise of Megabanks	265
5.3.6	The Development of the French Banking System	269
5.4	The Rise of German Banking	281
5.4.1	Ideas Determining the Development of Banking	282
5.4.2	The Conservative Backlash	293
5.4.3	The Second Restoration	299
5.4.4	Unification, Industrialization and the Rise of Megabanks	304
5.4.5	The Development of the German Banking System	313
5.5	Central Banking	322
5.5.1	Bank of England	323
5.5.2	Banque de France	325

5.5.3	Reichsbank	327
5.6	Non-profit Banks	328
5.6.1	Ideas Supporting Non-profit Banks	329
5.6.2	The Rise of Non-profit Banks	332
6	Conclusion	339
6.1	Ideas, Interests and Institutions or the Three Orders	341
6.2	Shifting Ideas, Interests and Institutions	342
6.3	Shifting Orders and Banking Revolutions	343
	References	355