

Table of Contents

1. Introduction	7
1.1 Setting the Question: What is Change?	7
1.2 The Structure of this Book	9
2. The Definition of Change	13
2.1 Brower's Hylomorphic Interpretation	16
2.2 Interpreting Aristotle's Account of Change in Physics III, 1, 201 a10–11	19
2.2.1 Contemporary Readings of Aristotle's Formula	22
2.2.2 Averroes on the Definition of Change	26
2.2.3 Albert the Great on the Definition of Change	28
2.3 Aquinas' Reading of Aristotle's Formula	30
2.4 Aquinas on the Mind-Independent Existence of Change	40
3. Aquinas between Presentism and Adverbialism	47
3.1 Semantics: Aquinas' Adverbialism	47
3.2 Metaphysics: only the Present Exists	52
3.3 The Rationale behind Aquinas' Eclectic Theory of Time	59
3.4 Appendix. Thomas Aquinas on Predication and Future Contingents. A Reply to Costa	65
3.4.1 The case for Aquinas' eternalism	66
3.4.2 Contra Costa	68
3.4.3 God's knowledge of non-present entities	71
4. Aquinas on Time	73
4.1 Aquinas' Definition of Time	73
4.1.1 Aristotle's Definition of Time is not Circular	74
4.1.2 Aquinas on the Alleged Circularity of Aristotle's Definition	77
4.2 The Extra-Mental Existence of Time	86

5. Conclusion	97
6. Bibliography	101
6.1 Primary Sources	101
6.1.1 Aristotle	101
6.1.2 Averroes	101
6.1.3 Albert the Great	101
6.1.4 Thomas Aquinas	101
6.1.5 John Duns Scotus	102
6.2 Translations	103
6.2.1 Translations of Aristotle's texts	103
6.2.2 Translations of Thomas Aquinas' texts	103
6.3 Secondary sources	103
Acknowledgements	107
Index of Names	109
Index of Matter	111