

Table of Contents

Foreword	9
-----------------	---

Chapter One

Early Soviet Postmodernism	14
1. The Deformation Model	14
2. The Conceptualist Turn	16
3. Western Postmodernism as an Epochal Problem	19
4. Dating Soviet Postmodernism	22
5. Four Perspectives on Early Soviet Postmodernism	26
5.1. The End of Dialectics	26
5.2. The Minimal Subject	34
5.3. Name, Simulacrum, Sign	46
5.4. The End of History as an Event in Itself	59
6. Concluding Remarks	63

Chapter Two

Late Modernism or Pre-Postmodernism?

Mixail Zoščenko and Konstantin Paustovskij	66
1. The Roots of Early Soviet Postmodernism	66
2. Modernist Monkey Business: Zoščenko's "Adventures of a Monkey"	67
3. At the Eye of the Storm: Paustovskij's "Grandma's Garden"	71
4. Better Late than Never: Paustovskij's "Telegram"	77
5. Summary	80

Chapter Three

Village Prose: The Importance of Being Limited	81
1. The Birth of Village Prose out of Socialist Realism	81
2. The Incredible Shrinking Subject: Jurij Nagibin's "Last Hunt"	87
3. No Possum, No Sop, Just Taters: Minimalist and Maximalist Economies in Solženicyn's "Matryona's Farm"	90
4. Journey to the Center of the Logos: Vasilij Belov's "Beyond the Three Portages"	95
5. Abortive Lives: Valentin Rasputin's "Vasilij and Vasilissa"	98

6. The Naked Gun: Vasilij Belov's "Choke Half-Choke"	101
7. Summary	105
Chapter Four
Vasilij Šukšin: The Dialectics of Stagnation	107
1. The Stagnant Dialectic	107
2. The Great Escape: "Stepka"	109
3. The Dialectics of Enlightenment: "The Microscope"	113
4. The Epistemology of the Lie: "Milles pardons, madame"	120
5. The Epistemology of Evil: "Lust for Life"	127
6. Summary	135
Chapter Five
Jurij Trifonov: The Not-So-Great Chain of Being	136
1. Trifonov as "Realist"	136
2. The Discrete Charm of the Bourgeoisie	140
3. The Subject, the Great Chain of Being, and Time	142
4. Summary: Rhizome or Human?	159
Chapter Six
Evgenij Evtušenko and Andrej Voznesenskij:
The Maximal Subject, the Simulacrum, and the Museum	164
1. The Totalitarian Subject	164
2. The Maximalist Figure "I Am Many"	166
3. The Maximalist Subject in Postmodernism	169
4. Goy is Jew: Evgenij Evtušenko's "Babij Yar"	170
5. Poet is Painter: Andrej Voznesenskij's "Goya"	182
Text Key	196
Bibliography	197
Index	206