

Contents

ULLRICH, H. (Berlin), Introduction to „Hominid Evolution - Lifestyles and survival strategies“	7
Primate models and early hominid lifestyles
TEMBROCK, G. (Berlin), Lifestyles and survival strategies at the primate level	18
KORTLANDT, A. (Oxford), Ape models of incipient hominid lifestyles: Chimpanzee or pygmy chimpanzee (Bonobo)?	25
BUTOVSKAYA, M.L. (Moscow), Coping with social tension in primate societies: Strategic modelling of early hominid lifestyles	44
Ways of life and survival strategies in early hominids
TOBIAS, P.V. (Johannesburg), Biological equipment, environment and survival in the australopithecine world	55
SCHRENK, F. & BROMAGE, T.G. (Darmstadt & New York), Climate change and survival strategies of early Homo and Paranthropus in the Malawi Rift	72
DOMÍNGUEZ-RODRIGO, M. (Madrid), Meat-eating and carcass procurement by hominids at the FLK Zinj 22 site, Olduvai Gorge (Tanzania): A new experimental approach to the old hunting-versus-scavenging debate	89
SANTANGELO, A. (Milano), Chopping tools as „useful possessions“: A Pliocene tool behaviour leading to bigger brain size selection (and connected ability for culture)	112
VISHNYATSKY, L.B. (St. Petersburg), Why cultural behaviour became a part of early hominid adaptation strategies (On the causes of the first „cultural revolution“)	121
Human adaptation strategies
CACHEL, S. & HARRIS, J.W.K. (New Brunswick), The adaptive zone of Homo erectus from an African perspective	128
HENKE, W., ROTHE, H. & ALT, K.W. (Mainz, Göttingen & Freiburg), Dmanisi and the early Eurasian dispersal of the genus Homo	138
VLČEK, E. (Praha), Homo finds from Bilzingsleben and Weimar-Ehringsdorf	156
SCHWARTZ, J.H., TATTERSALL, I. & LAITMAN, J.T. (Pittsburgh & New York), New thoughts on Neanderthal behaviour: Evidence from nasal morphology	166
PIONTEK, J. (Poznan), Patterns of adaptive strategy in the Upper Palaeolithic and post-Palaeolithic populations: Evidence from Central Europe	187
LENEY, M. & FOLEY, R.A. (Oxford & Cambridge), Competition ecology: Pleistocene hominids and the carnivore community	205
Lifestyle adaptations in Palaeolithic humans
SCHÜLE, W. † & SCHUSTER, S. (Freiburg i.Br.), Ethology and population dynamics: Keystones for anthropogeneic extinctions and hominid expansion - The eutrophic zone, its genesis and implications	224
SONDAAR, P.Y. & de VOS, J. (New York & Leiden), Survival and adaptation of Pleistocene humans on islands	240
OTTE, M. (Liège), Modes of life in the Palaeolithic: Not survival but well-being	248
SIGMON, B.A. (Toronto), Reproductive ecology and early hominids	252
KOZINTSEV, A.G. & BUTOVSKAYA, M.L. (St. Petersburg & Moscow), Disinhibition of anti-cultural behaviour: A means of adaptation in hominids?	262

SCHIEFENHÖVEL, W. (Andechs), Modern models of the past: The life of the Eipo, Highlands of West-New Guinea	268
Cultural adaptations
CLARK, J.D. (Berkeley), Cultural continuity and change in hominid behaviour in Africa during the Middle to Upper Pleistocene transition	277
MANIA, D., MANIA, U. & VLČEK, E. (Jena & Praha), The Bilzingsleben site - Homo erectus , his culture and his ecosphere	293
ROLLAND, N. (Victoria), The Middle Palaeolithic as development stage: Evidence from technology, subsistence, settlement systems, and hominid socio-ecology	315
KOZŁOWSKI, J.K. (Kraków), Contrasting lifestyles and survival strategies between the Gravettian and the Epigravettian in Central und South-eastern Europe	335
Hunting and subsistence adaptation strategies
GÜLEÇ, E., HOWELL, F.C. & WHITE, T.D. (Ankara & Berkeley), Dursunlu - A new Lower Pleistocene faunal and artifact-bearing locality in southern Anatolia	349
TURNER, E. (Neuwied), The problem of interpreting hominid subsistence strategies at Lower Palaeolithic sites: Miesenheim I - a case-study from the Central Rhineland of Germany	365
THIEME, H. (Hannover), Lower Palaeolithic throwing spears and other wooden implements from Schöningen, Germany	383
GAMBLE, C. & STEELE, J. (Southampton), Hominid ranging patterns and dietary strategies	396
BOCHERENS, H. (Paris), Reconstruction of Neandertal diet using bone collagen carbon and nitrogen stable isotopes	410
JÄGER, K.-D. & SCHÄFER, D.K. (Halle & Innsbruck), Gathering fruits as a way of food supply during the Palaeolithic period	429
BRATLUND, B. (Solna), Comments on the osteological criteria for hunting and scavenging in the Middle Palaeolithic	435
VALOCH, K. (Brno), Jagd- und Rohstoffökonomie im Mittelpaläolithikum Mährens (Hunting and raw materials economy in the Middle Palaeolithic of Moravia)	446
JELÍNEK, J. (Brno), Behaviour and survival strategy in Moravian early Gravettians. Mammoth hunters or scavengers?	457
PICHLER, S.L. (Freiburg i.Br.), Survival strategies in the Eastern Gravettian	480
CACHEL, S. (New Brunswick), Dietary shifts and the origins of the European Upper Palaeolithic	494
RONEN, A. (Haifa), Ideology-dependent subsistence in the aceramic of Cyprus	505
Social survival strategies
FACCHINI, F. (Bologna), Planning capacity and symbolism as survival strategies	517
POWER, C. (London), Female proto-symbolic strategies: A testable model for earliest symbolic behaviour	526
ULLRICH, H. (Berlin), Life and death, mortuary practices and survival strategies in the Palaeolithic	543
List of contributors	563