

Contents

	Table of Contents	VI
<hr/> Chapter One	Reconstruction and Marshall Aid (1948 to 1960)	I
<hr/> Chapter Two	Going Global: Development Aid and Export Financing (1961 to 1970)	65
<hr/> Chapter Three	Reorientation and Expansion (1971 to 1989)	105
<hr/> Chapter Four	The Fall of the Wall and the Challenges of German Unification (1990 to 1998)	163
	Review	211
Overviews	<ul style="list-style-type: none">– Key Events in the KfW's History– Board of Directors– Board of Management– Bibliography– Annotations– List of Pictures– Index	<ul style="list-style-type: none">217229231235239243245

Table of Contents

Chapter One: Reconstruction and Marshall Aid (1948 to 1960)

1. The prehistory of the Kreditanstalt für Wiederaufbau	1
1.1 Germany's political situation after the Second World War	1
1.2 The economic and social situation in Germany after the war	4
1.3 Germany in the years 1947 and 1948	6
– The US-British Bizone	6
– The restructuring of the banking landscape and currency reform	7
1.4 The Reconstruction Loan Corporation	9
1.5 The KfW Law is drawn up	14
2. The KfW commences its work	18
2.1 The first Board of Directors of the KfW	18
2.2 The Board of Management of the KfW in the fifties	23
2.3 A small team making big deals	27

3. The difficult years of reconstruction: 1949 to 1953	29
3.1 The procurement of funds: the foremost problem of the early years	30
– The GARIOA counterparts for the Immediate Programme of 1949	31
– The Marshall Aid counterparts – the ERP reserve fund and the ECA tranches I to III	31
– Other D-Mark counterparts	34
– A World Bank loan to the KfW?	35
– The first KfW bonds: the unavoidable flop	35
3.2 Reconstruction loans: the allocation of scarce resources	37
– The main focus of funding: energy, coal, steel	39
– Food and agriculture	41
– Housing construction	42
– Manufacturing industry and shipbuilding	44
3.3 Taking stock: What did Marshall Aid achieve?	45
3.4 Pioneering achievements in export financing	46
4. The “golden” fifties and the KfW from 1954	48
4.1 Revolving use of the counterparts: the German ERP special fund is set up	49
4.2 The KfW establishes itself as a prime borrower on the capital market	51
4.3 The struggle for equity capital	52
4.4 Europeans of the first hour: the European Coal and Steel Community and the KfW	53
4.5 At the service of German unity: Saarland and Berlin	55
4.6 SMEs, environmental protection and areas bordering the GDR	57
4.7 The renaissance of export financing	58
4.8 First steps into the Third World	60
5. The first twelve years in retrospect	62

Chapter Two: Going Global: Development Aid and Export Financing (1961 to 1970)

1. The sixties	65
2. The last ten years of the Abs and Martini era	66
	2.1	The new amendment of the KfW Law 66
	2.2	The Board of Directors under its chairman Abs 68
	2.3	The new managers for international functions 70
	2.4	“A breath of the big wide world” 73
3. The first years of German development aid	76
	3.1	“The Germans to the front!” 76
	3.2	A re-run of 1949: procuring the funds was the hard part 78
	3.3	The KfW takes over responsibility for capital aid 80
	3.4	The political setting of capital aid 81
	3.5	From Elson to Eppler – The KfW and the ministries 82
	3.6	The KfW’s capital aid in the sixties 85
		– Project aid 85
		– Loans to development banks 89
		– Commodity aid and consolidation loans 90
		– Mixed financing and cofinancing 91
4. Export financing in the sixties: from supplier credits to pro-exporter buyer credits	92

5. Project financing to secure supplies of raw materials to Germany	96
6. The KfW in Germany	99
6.1 Sectoral and regional structural promotion	99
6.2 Coal, iron and steel and energy	101
6.3 Berlin behind the wall	102
7. Capital market and bond management	102
8. Summary assessment	104

Chapter Three: Reorientation and Expansion (1971 to 1989)

1. The last two decades of the Bonn Republic	105
2. Change of generation and reorganisation at the KfW	106
		2.1 From Hermann J. Abs to Helmut Schmidt: the finance minister presides over the KfW 107
		2.2 From Martini via Müller to Götte: from the transitional difficulties to continuity on the Board of Management 110
		2.3 Reorganisation and growth 115
3. New paths in domestic economic promotion	119
		3.1 Market resources for the Mittelstand: the KfW develops its M-programme 120
		3.2 The ERP programmes from 1971 to 1989 123
		3.3 Cyclical stimulation programmes 124
		3.4 Direct loans to the basic goods industry 126
4. Export financing: on land, on water, in the air – even in outer space!	129
		4.1 General export financing: big-ticket deals and framework agreements 131
		4.2 The European Airbus and its European financing 135
		4.3 Container ships and cruisers: modern German vessels ply foreign waters 138

5. From capital aid to financial cooperation	139
5.1 The development of development policy from 1971 bis 1989	139
5.2 The KfW's involvement in financial cooperation	143
– Project aid	145
– The progression to technical aid	148
– The new forms of financial cooperation: sectoral programmes and structural assistance	150
– The other side of the coin: major projects and mixed financing in the advanced developing countries	151
6. Underground and undersea – Washington and Warsaw	153
6.1 Nickel, iron ore, lead, zinc and copper	153
6.2 The Euro-Tunnel: new channels for Europe	155
6.3 Washington demands forex offset to let US troops stay in Germany	156
6.4 Warsaw demands a billion Marks to let Polish Germans emigrate	157
7. The way to Wall Street: new fund-raising avenues	158
7.1 Searching for money in the desert sand	159
7.2 The first German sellers on the Yankee market	160
8. Outlook: well prepared for the challenges of German unification	162

Chapter Four: The Fall of the Wall and the Challenges of German Unification (1990 to 1998)

1. The unexpected fall of the Berlin Wall and the turbulent year 1990	163
2. German unification – the KfW puts the “re” back into “reconstruction”	167
		2.1 The main KfW programmes aimed at fostering the resurgence of eastern Germany
		– The housing modernisation programme
		– Municipal investment and environmental protection
		– Reconstruction of the Mittelstand
		2.2 Attempting to drive with the brake on: the KfW and the Treuhand agency
		2.3 Human resources for the new Länder
3. Waigel, change, growth – Göttes goes, Vogt follows	178
4. Eight billion Marks for the Soviet troops: the house-building programme for the returning Russians	185
5. The KfW goes to Berlin and obtains more than DM 2 billion of extra equity for new functions	188
6. New approaches in export financing: eastern exports, project financing, globalisation	192
		6.1 Promotion of east German exports
		6.2 Chances and risks of project financing
		6.3 Globalisation and Germany’s locational attractiveness

7. Financial cooperation in the nineties	198
7.1 The end of the beginning, but not the beginning of the end!	198
7.2 The KfW: protection of natural resources and composite financing	200
8. East of the Oder: theoretical and practical help in adapting to the market economy	202
8.1 Colonel Grigori Mikhailovich becomes a bank manager	202
8.2 Help for the ethnic Germans in western Siberia and St. Petersburg	203
8.3 Transform programme: a servant of many masters	203
8.4 Promotional banks: the young sister institutions in the East	205
9. New avenues for small German firms: innovations and risk capital	206
10. Equipped for the future with innovative refinancing concepts	208

Review 211

Overviews
Key Events in the KfW's History	217
Board of Directors	229
Board of Management	231
Bibliography	235
Annotations	239
List of Pictures	243
Index	245