

Contents

1	Unit of Mass and Standards of Mass	1
1.1	Concepts of Mass	1
1.1.1	Gravitational Mass	2
1.1.2	Inertial Mass	2
1.1.3	Equality of Inertial and Gravitational Mass	3
1.2	Mass and Weight of a Body	3
1.2.1	Conventional Mass	4
1.2.2	Variation of the Weight of a Body on Surface of Earth	4
1.3	Unit of Mass.....	7
1.3.1	History of the Units of Metre and Kilogram	7
1.3.2	Unit of Length	8
1.3.3	Kilogram de Archives	8
1.4	Metric Convention	8
1.4.1	International Kilogram	9
1.4.2	National Prototypes of Kilogram	11
1.4.3	National Prototype Kilogram and Other Standards in India	11
1.4.4	Calibration of Transfer Standards of Mass	12
1.5	Hierarchy of Mass Standards.....	12
1.5.1	Nomenclature	12
1.5.2	Measurement Chain	14
1.5.3	Tracking the Mass Values of Standards	14
1.5.4	Period of Verification or Calibration.....	15
1.5.5	Maximum Permissible Errors.....	15
1.6	Traceability of Measurements	15
1.6.1	Traceability	15
1.6.2	CIPM MRA.....	17
	References.....	17

2	Two-Pan Equal-Arm Balances	19
2.1	Introduction	19
2.2	Brief History	19
2.3	Other 1-kg Balances	20
2.3.1	Equal-Arm Interchangeable Pan Balance UK	20
2.3.2	Equal Arm with Double Interchangeable Pan Balance	22
2.3.3	Substitution Balance NPL-India	22
2.3.4	Electronic Balance with Automation at NPL-India	23
2.3.5	Hydrostatic Balance	24
2.4	Installation of a Balance	26
2.4.1	Proper Environmental Conditions for Balance Room	26
2.4.2	Requirements for Location of the Balance	26
2.5	Evaluation of Metrological Data for a Balance	27
2.5.1	Need for Evaluation	27
2.5.2	Visual Examination	29
2.5.3	Sensitivity	30
2.5.4	Period of Swing or Time Period	32
2.5.5	Accuracy of Rider Bar	33
2.5.6	Stability/ Repeatability	35
2.5.7	Repeatability of Weighing	35
2.5.8	Equality of Arm Lengths	36
2.5.9	Calculation of Arm Ratio, Repeatability of Single and Double Weighing	37
2.5.10	Requirement for Arm Ratio and Repeatability of Weighing	39
2.5.11	Test for Parallelism of Knife Edges	39
2.6	Methods of Weighing	41
2.6.1	Direct Weighing	41
2.6.2	Transposition Weighing	41
2.6.3	Substitution Weighing	42
2.7	Double Transposition and Substitution Weighing	42
2.7.1	Double Transposition Method	42
2.7.2	Double Transposition with Simultaneous Determination of S.R.	43
2.7.3	Double Substitution	45
2.7.4	Double Substitution Weighing with Simultaneous Determination of S.R.	45
2.8	Maintenance of Standard Balances	46
2.8.1	Category of Balances	46
2.8.2	Reference Balances	46

2.8.3	Secondary Standard Balances	46
2.8.4	Working Standard Balances	47
	References	48
3	Single-Pan Mechanical Balances	49
3.1	Introduction	49
3.2	Description of a Single-Pan Balance	49
3.3	Evaluation of Single-Pan Balance	52
3.3.1	Verification Interval	53
3.3.2	General Examination	53
3.3.3	Sensitivity of the Sprit Level of the Balance	54
3.3.4	Hardness of Knife Edges and Bearing Planes	54
3.3.5	Sensitivity Setting	54
3.3.6	Tests	55
3.3.7	Test for Smallest Built-in Weight and Calibration of Illuminated Scale	55
3.3.8	Calibration of Lower Half and Upper Half of the Optical Scale	56
3.3.9	Short Duration Test for Precision of the Balance	57
3.3.10	Calibration of Built-in Weights for All Dial Settings	59
3.3.11	Performance Test	60
3.4	Uncertainty in Calibration of the Balance	62
3.4.1	Uncertainty of Mass Determination by the Balance	63
	References	64
4	Electronic Balances and Effect of Gravity	65
4.1	Introduction	65
4.2	Electromagnetic Force Compensation	66
4.2.1	Principle of EMFC	66
4.2.2	Principle of EMFC Balance	67
4.3	Partially Electromagnetic Force Compensated Balance	68
4.3.1	Partially EMFC Two-Pan Balance	68
4.3.2	Partially EMFC Single-Pan Balance	69
4.4	Fully EMFC Balance	70
4.4.1	Without Lever	70
4.4.2	Balance with Mechanical Levers	71
4.4.3	Working of EMFC Balances	72
4.4.4	Electronic Circuitry	72
4.5	Range of Capacity of EMFC Balance	75
4.6	Availability of EMFC Cells	75
4.7	Effect of Variation in Gravity on Electronic Balances	76
4.7.1	Instruments Affected by Gravity	76
4.7.2	Error Due to Variation in g	77
4.7.3	Variation of g with Respect to Latitude	78

4.7.4	Error per Degree Change in Latitude at Different Places	80
4.7.5	Significant Error	81
4.7.6	Choice of Values of “n” to Calculate Error at Various Latitudes	81
4.7.7	Latitude Differences to Cause Significant Error	82
4.7.8	Intra-state Movement of Electronic Weighing Instruments	85
4.7.9	Error Due to Altitude	86
4.8	Conclusion About the Movement of Electronic Weighing Instruments	87
	References	88
5	Strain Gauge Load Cells	89
5.1	Load Cell	89
5.2	Construction	89
5.2.1	Elastic Spring Element	89
5.2.2	Detector	89
5.2.3	Pasting	90
5.3	Resistance Strain Gauge	90
5.3.1	Change in Resistance	90
5.3.2	Measurement of Resistance	91
5.3.3	Configuration of Strain Gauges on Spring Element	93
5.3.4	Dimensions of the Spring Element	96
5.3.5	Methods of Connecting Several Load Cells	97
5.3.6	Trimming Devices in the Load Cell	98
5.4	Some Important Terms	101
5.4.1	Definitions	101
5.4.2	Notations Used on Load Cells	103
5.5	Classification of Load Cells	104
5.5.1	Accuracy Class	104
5.5.2	Number of Intervals	104
5.5.3	Load Application	105
5.6	Maximum Permissible Errors for Load Cells	105
5.6.1	Maximum Permissible Error at Verification/Model Approval	105
5.6.2	Maximum Permissible Error at Inspection	106
5.6.3	Determination of Error for Digital Instruments	106
5.7	Tests to Be Conducted	107
5.7.1	Performance Tests	107
5.7.2	Influence Factors Tests	107
5.7.3	Test Conditions	107
5.8	Performance Tests	109
5.8.1	Permissible Error, Repeatability, Nonlinearity and Hysteresis Tests	109

5.8.2	Creep and Minimum Dead Load Return Tests	111
5.8.3	Performance Tests at Different Temperatures	112
5.8.4	Temperature Effect on Minimum Dead Load Output	112
5.8.5	Effect of Barometric Pressure Test	112
5.8.6	Humidity Test	112
5.9	Additional Tests	113
5.9.1	Voltage Variations	114
5.9.2	Short-Time Power Reductions	114
5.9.3	Bursts (Electrical Fast Transients)	115
5.9.4	Electrostatic Discharge	116
5.9.5	Electromagnetic Susceptibility	116
5.9.6	Span Stability	117
5.10	Requirements for Load Cells	119
	References	119
6	Various Types of Transducers for Weighing	121
6.1	Introduction	121
6.1.1	Classification	122
6.1.2	Force Applied by a Body	122
6.2	Vibrating String/Vibrating Strip Devices	122
6.2.1	Single-String Transducer Cell	123
6.2.2	Double-String Transducer Cell	124
6.2.3	S-Shaped Vibrating Strip Transducer	124
6.2.4	Transducer with String Vibrating in Heterodyne Mode	125
6.2.5	Use of Vibrating String Transducers	125
6.3	Tuning Fork Transducer	127
6.4	Gyroscopic Devices	128
6.5	Optical Interference Transducer	130
6.6	Magneto-elastic Transducer (Pressductor)	131
6.6.1	Construction	131
6.6.2	Principle of Magneto-elastic Transducer	132
6.7	Change in Capacitance Transducer	133
6.8	Photoelectric Device	134
6.9	Hydraulic Load Transducer	135
6.10	Piezoelectric Transducer	135
6.10.1	Longitudinal and Transverse Effect	136
6.10.2	Piezoelectric Device and Cascading to Increase the Output	136
6.10.3	Sensitivity in Different Modes	138
6.10.4	Electronic Measurement Circuits	138
6.10.5	Particulars of Piezoelectric Transducers	139
6.11	Strain Gauge of Semiconductor Material	140
6.12	Piezo-resistant Force Transducer	140

6.13	Linear Variable Differential Transformer	140
6.14	Inductive Worm-Spring Transducer	144
6.15	Surface Wave Resonator	144
6.16	Nucleonic Weighing	145
6.16.1	Principle	146
	References	147
7	Testing of Electronic Balances	149
7.1	Introduction	149
7.2	Principle of Digital Indications	149
7.2.1	Digital and Analogue Instruments	149
7.2.2	Principle of Digital Indication Device	150
7.2.3	Equality in Error of Digital and Analogue Instruments	153
7.2.4	Maximum Permissible Errors	154
7.2.5	Definitions of Some Important Terms	154
7.2.6	Practical Determination of the Error of a Digital Machine	156
7.2.7	Verification of Digital Instruments for Compliance	156
7.2.8	Rule for Errors of the Combined System	157
7.3	Testing of Electronic Balances/Weighing Machines	157
7.3.1	Introduction	157
7.3.2	General Requirements	158
7.3.3	Descriptive Requirements	158
7.3.4	Classes of Weighing Instruments	158
7.3.5	Performance Tests	160
7.4	Type Approval Tests	163
7.4.1	Tests to Meet the Requirements for the Effect of Influence Quantities	163
7.4.2	Extreme Temperature Test	164
7.4.3	Variation in Supply Voltage and Frequency Test	165
7.4.4	Short Time Power Reduction Test	165
7.4.5	Electrical Bursts Test	165
7.4.6	Electrostatic Discharge Test	166
7.4.7	Electromagnetic Susceptibility Test	166
7.5	Nonlinearity	167
7.5.1	Methods of Estimating Nonlinearity	167
7.6	Hysteresis Error	168
7.7	Guidelines for Choosing Balances	168
7.8	Class of Electronic Balances Not Covered by OIML	169
	References	169

8	Air Density and Buoyancy Correction	171
8.1	Introduction	171
8.2	Equation for Density of Air	172
8.2.1	Parameters of the Gas Equation	173
8.2.2	Molar Mass of Water Vapour	175
8.2.3	Constants Involved in p_{sv} , f and Z	177
8.2.4	Variable Parameters	177
8.2.5	Uncertainty Budget of Air Density Evaluation from CIPM Formula	178
8.2.6	Air Density Tables	178
8.3	Air Buoyancy Artefact Method	178
8.3.1	Principle	178
8.3.2	Artefacts	182
8.3.3	Uncertainty Budget	188
8.4	Optical Method for Determination of Air Density	190
8.4.1	Relation of Refractive Index and Density of Air	190
8.4.2	Experimental Work	191
8.4.3	BIPM Refractometer	192
	References	196
9	Weights—Standards of Mass	199
9.1	Introduction	199
9.2	OIML Classification of Weights	200
9.3	Maximum Permissible Errors	201
9.3.1	OIML Maximum Permissible Errors	201
9.3.2	Maximum Permissible Errors in Weights in USA	201
9.3.3	Maximum Permissible Errors in Commercial Weights in India	203
9.4	Maximum Permissible Errors for Other Weights	205
9.4.1	Maximum Permissible Errors for Weights Used in Scientific and Industrial Fields	205
9.4.2	Maximum Permissible Errors in Standard Weights for Legal Metrology	205
9.4.3	Special Purpose Reference Standards (Germany)	205
9.5	Material of Weights	205
9.5.1	Property Requirements for Material of Weights	206
9.5.2	Material for Weights of 1 g and Above	208
9.5.3	Material for Fractional Weights	211
9.5.4	Material for Adjustment of Weights	211
9.6	Design and Finish of the Weights	212
9.6.1	Basics of Design of Weights	212
9.6.2	Surface Finish of Gram Weights	215

9.6.3	Fractional Weights	215
9.6.4	Weight Box	216
9.7	Effect of Finite Magnetic Susceptibility	217
9.7.1	Expression for Magnetic Force	217
9.7.2	Measurement of Magnetic Susceptibility of Weights	219
9.8	Electrostatic Charges	221
9.9	Effect of Inequality of Temperature of Weight and Its Surroundings	222
9.9.1	Buoyant Force	222
9.9.2	Change in Mass Due to Convection of Air	223
9.9.3	Change in Indication with Time	224
9.9.4	Change in Mass Due to Adsorption	225
9.10	Effect of Density of Material of Weights	227
9.10.1	Criterion for Density Range of the Weight	228
9.10.2	Determination of Density of a Weight	229
9.11	Physical Properties	232
9.12	Surface Resistance of Platinum–Iridium Mass Standards	232
9.12.1	Effect of Change in Relative Humidity	234
9.12.2	Effect of Change in Temperature	234
9.12.3	Effect of Change in Pressure	234
9.13	Effect of Weighing in Air and Vacuum	235
9.14	Stability of Mass Standards	235
9.14.1	Instability in Mass Standards Due to Mercury Contamination	235
9.14.2	Instability in Mass Standards Due to Atmospheric Carbon and Oxygen	236
	References	237
10	Group Weighing Method	239
10.1	Introduction	239
10.2	Different Sets of Weights	240
10.2.1	Sets of Weights	240
10.2.2	Head Weights	241
10.3	Principal of Group Weighing	241
10.3.1	Linear Equations and Method of Least Squares	242
10.3.2	Design Matrix	243
10.3.3	Variance Covariance Matrix	244
10.3.4	Weighting Factor	245
10.3.5	Improving a Weighing Design	246
10.3.6	Efficiency of a Weighing Design	248
10.3.7	Average of Squares of Residual Errors	248
10.4	Calibration of Set of Weights	248
10.4.1	Series 5, 2, 2, 1	248
10.4.2	Series 5, 2, 1, 1'	259

10.4.3	Series 5,2,1,1' (BIPM)	262
10.4.4	Series 4, 3, 2, 1, (BIPM)	265
10.4.5	Series 5 3 2 1	270
10.5	Calculations with Weighing Factors	274
10.6	Multiples of Unit of Mass	278
10.7	Weights of Same Denominations	280
10.7.1	Optimum Value of N	281
10.7.2	Experimental Work	282
10.7.3	Numerical Example	283
References		284
11	Nanotechnology for Detection of Small Mass Difference	287
11.1	Introduction	287
11.2	Cantilever Vibration	287
11.2.1	Characterisation of Cantilever	288
11.2.2	Dimensions and Mass of an Attogram Cantilever	290
11.3	Nanotechnology	291
11.4	Examples of Fabrication of Micro-cantilevers	292
11.4.1	Etching Process	292
11.4.2	Electron Beam Lithography	294
11.4.3	Various Micro-cantilevers in Use	295
11.5	Principles of Detection of Micro-cantilever Motion	295
11.6	Examples of Detection Micro-cantilever Response	296
11.6.1	Detection by Using an Interferometer	296
11.6.2	Detection by Capacity Measurement	296
11.6.3	Improved Fibre-Optic Interferometer	299
11.7	Mass Sensitivity of Cantilevers	300
11.7.1	No Change in Spring Constant (End-Point Loading)	300
11.7.2	Changing Spring Constant (Uniform Loading)	301
11.8	Mass Detector Cantilevers	301
11.8.1	At Femtogram Level	301
11.8.2	At Attogram Level	302
11.8.3	Sub-attogram Level	303
11.8.4	Zeptogram Level	303
11.8.5	Sub-zeptogram Level (One Gold Atom)	304
11.8.6	At Attoneutron Level	304
11.8.7	A Final Goal	305
11.8.8	Viscosity: A Problem	306
11.9	Minimum Detectable Force/Mass	306
11.10	Micro-cantilever Applications	307
11.10.1	Large Surface to Volume Ratio	307
11.10.2	Examination of Surface	308
11.10.3	Thermal/Photo-thermal	308

11.10.4	Low Power Consumption
	Micro-cantilevers	309
11.10.5	Chemistry	309
11.10.6	Biology	310
11.10.7	Health Care	310
11.10.8	Physics (Viscosity and Density)	311
11.10.9	Magnetometry	312
11.10.10	Data Storage	313
11.10.11	Terrorist Threat Detection	313
	References	313
12	Redefining the Unit of Mass	321
12.1	Introduction	321
12.1.1	Requirements for Defining a Base Unit	322
12.2	Possibilities to Redefine Kilogram	322
12.2.1	Outcome of Redefining a Unit of Measurement	323
12.2.2	Meaning of Taking a Measured Value as Exact	324
12.3	The Kilogram Through Avogadro Constant	324
12.3.1	Values of Avogadro Constant	325
12.3.2	Detection of Electrically Active or Inactive Impurities	327
12.3.3	Detection of Vacancy Concentration	328
12.3.4	Lattice Parameter of Silicon	329
12.3.5	Mean Molar Mass	329
12.4	The Kilogram Through Ion Collection Method	331
12.5	The Kilogram Through Levitation Method	333
12.6	The Kilogram Through Voltage Balance	335
12.7	The Kilogram Through Watt Balance	337
12.8	The Kilogram, Einstein Energy Equation and Planck Constant	339
12.8.1	Another Way of Defining the Kilogram	340
12.9	Planck Constant h in Terms of Other Constants	341
12.9.1	Status of Watt Balance	341
12.10	Practical Standards to Realise Kilogram	343
12.11	Conclusion in Regard to the Kilogram	343
	References	344
	CGPM Draft Resolution 2011	347
	Index	349