

Contents

1	Introduction: The City as a Kaleidoscope	1
2	The Observation: Cities are Brands	11
2.1	Different Cities	15
2.2	Fictional Cities	19
2.3	Evolutionary Cities	30
2.4	Contested Cities	48
2.5	Designed Cities	55
2.6	Distinguishable Cities	60
2.7	Conclusion: City Brands Exist	79
	References	82
3	The Assertion: City Brands are Created	89
3.1	The City in Competition	94
3.2	The Entrepreneurial City	102
3.3	The Demanded City	105
3.4	The City as an Offer	108
3.5	The Marketing of the City	110
3.6	Conclusion: City Brands must be Created	114
	References	115
4	The Description: How City Brands are Created	119
4.1	The Playing Field: The Urban Public	126
4.1.1	Unlimited Playing Field	126
4.1.2	Limited Roles	128
4.2	The Process: City Politics	129
4.2.1	Theoretical Possibilities	130
4.2.2	Practical Prerequisites	132
4.2.3	Solvable Problems	133
4.3	The Idea: The Singular City	135
4.3.1	Imagined Futures	138
4.3.2	Available Futures	141

- 4.3.3 Exemplary Futures 143
 - 4.3.4 Made Futures 155
 - 4.4 The Structure: The Urban Offer. 156
 - 4.4.1 The Portfolio 158
 - 4.4.2 The Structure 162
 - 4.4.3 The Instrumentation 163
 - 4.4.4 The Process 164
 - 4.5 The Shape: The Cityscape 165
 - 4.5.1 The Designed Image 166
 - 4.5.2 The Projected Image 170
 - 4.5.3 The Received Image. 174
 - 4.6 The Experience: Urban Life. 183
 - 4.6.1 Experiencing a City 185
 - 4.6.2 The Typical of a City 187
 - 4.6.3 Shaping the City Experiences? 196
 - 4.6.4 Powerbrands and Hidden Champions 204
 - 4.7 Conclusion: City Brands Can Be Created 206
 - References. 207
- 5 Conclusion: Should the City Become a Brand? 213
 - 5.1 City Brands 216
 - 5.2 Imagined Geographies 219
 - 5.3 Craft Rules 223
 - References. 226