Contents

Preface 9

1. Introduction
Valérie Cohen-Scali 11

2. Changes in Work and Competences
Alain Kokosowski 17
2.1 Main changes in the workplace 17
2.1.1 The end of a model 17
2.1.2 Fundamental changes in the relationship between people and their work 18
2.1.3 The consequences on individuals 19
2.2 Continued existence of a wide variety of work situations 20
2.3 The question of competences in a new working environment 25
2.3.1 The professionalisation of key players 25
2.3.2 The importance of 'acting competently' in a work situation 26
2.3.3 Training schemes that facilitate problem solving in a range of situations 27

3. Professionalisation and the Development of Competences in Education and Training
Richard Wittorski 31
3.1 Professionalisation: A polysemous word 32
3.1.1 Professionalisation and the professions 32
3.1.2 Professionalisation and efficiency at work 33
3.1.3 Professionalisation and adult education 33
3.2 The development of competences: Varied processes 35
3.2.1 The development of competences within the organization 35
3.2.2 The development of competences through a third party 37
3.2.3 The development of competences in/through work activity 38
3.3 The development of competences and professionalisation 43
3.3.1 The attribution of competences to individuals 43

Bibliografische Informationen
http://d-nb.info/1018254269

digitalisiert durch DEUTSCHE NATIONAL BIBLIOTHEK

3.3.2 Professionalisation and the development of competences in identity negotiation 47

4. The Role of Professional Didactics in Skills Development for Training and Education Professionals
Thierry Piot 53
4.1 Introduction: From quality of service to the development of professional skills 53
4.2 Professional didactics: Objectives and theoretical foundations 54
4.2.1 Origins of professional didactics 54
4.2.2 The objectives of professional didactics 55
4.2.3 The theoretical foundations of professional didactics 57
4.3 Analysing activity: A tool for understanding and action 60
4.3.1 A few preliminary remarks on activity 60
4.3.2 What is the appropriate methodology for identifying an activity? 62
4.4 Activities 'aimed at other people' 63
4.4.1 Characteristics of activities aimed at other people 63
4.4.2 Comparison between traditional industrial work and work aimed at other people 65
4.4.3 Learning from activities in work 'aimed at other people' 67
4.5 Conclusion 70

5. Competence Evaluation Processes in Adult Education
Valérie Cohen-Scali 73
5.1 What is involved in evaluating competences? 74
5.2 Competences: A difficult object to evaluate 75
5.2.1 Evaluations must be able to accommodate a range of conceptions of competences 76
5.2.2 Evaluation relates to a multi-faceted object 77
5.2.3 Evaluation must include the individual being assessed 78
5.3 Psychosocial bias in competence evaluation 78
5.3.1 The norm of internality 79
5.3.2 The norm of consistency 80
5.3.3 The formation of impressions 81
5.4 Competence evaluation tools 82
5.4.1 Characteristics of competence evaluation tools 82
5.4.2 Categories of evaluation tools used in Europe 84
5.4.3 Specific features of evaluating collective competences 86
5.5 Evaluating competences in Europe 87
5.5.1 Competence evaluation and validation systems in European countries 87
5.5.2 Examples of competence evaluation schemes in Europe 88
5.6 Conclusion 91

6. Competence Management and Adult Education
Valérie Cohen-Scali 95
6.1 The main determinants of competence management 96
6.1.1 The European framework 96
6.1.2 Vocational training and lifelong learning national strategies 98
6.1.3 Competence management at the workplace 101
6.1.4 Competence management and new individual attitudes 102
6.2 Competence based on individual identity 103
6.2.1 Individuals facing numerous career transitions 104
6.2.2 The emergence of 'boundaryless careers' 105
6.3 Competence management practices and tools 107
6.3.1 Strategic Workforce Planning (SWP) 107
6.3.2 Continuing vocational training in firms 108
6.3.3 Career counselling and the life designing new paradigm 109
6.4 Conclusions 111

7. Changes in Vocational Training and New Models of Competences for Individuals
Alain Kokosowski 115
7.1 New structures and new paradigms 115
7.1.1 Changes in vocational training organisations 117
7.1.2 Changes in teaching paradigms 118
7.1.3 The impact of information and communications technology 119
7.2 The central role of work in vocational training 120
7.2.1 Incorporating work in vocational training 120
7.2.2 New roles for teachers and trainers 122
7.3 Principal changes in the teaching and training professions 125
7.3.1 An organisational approach to professional roles 125
7.3.2 Broadening and diversification of the roles of training professionals 127
7.3.3 Positioning of key players in vocational training: The French example 128
7.4 Conclusion 131

8. Conclusion
Valérie Cohen-Scali 133

List of Abbreviations 136

Annotated Bibliography 137

References 138

About the Authors 144

Index 145