

Contents

Tobias Nanz and Hedwig Wagner

Cold War Europe – A Space of Communication: Introduction — 1

I Infrastructure

Joanna Walewska-Choptiany

Wired Radio Spreads its Tentacles over the Country: The Development of a Wired Radio System in Post-War Poland — 19

Tobias Nanz

European Crisis Communication: British and French Hotlines to Moscow as Means of Disruption — 45

Hedwig Wagner

(Telecommunication) Satellites – Celestial and Terrestrial Concepts of Europe — 61

Johannes Pause

Stories of Rescue and Sacrifice: Cold War Cinema and the Arctic Imaginary — 87

II Broadcasting

Luciana Radut-Gaghi

Radio Free Europe and Radio France Internationale: The Tones of Democracy and the Voices of Exiles — 119

Thomas Wegener Friis and Nils Abraham

Creating an Alternative Public: Socialist Media and its Followers during the Cold War — 133

Will Studdert

“Refined and Experienced Opponents?”: The BBC’s German East Zone Programme in the Cold War — 155

Anna Mazurkiewicz and Anna Podciborska

“I Wanted to Know the Truth”: Listeners to Western Radio Broadcasts in Poland during the Cold War: A Pilot Study — 179

III Circulation of European Ideas

Matthias Bauer and Iulia-Karin Patrut

A Romanian Renegade: The Case of Petru Dumitriu — 197

Joanna Nowicki

“Fifteen Minutes with Jacek Kaczmarski” on Radio Free Europe (1983–1995): A Voice Impossible to Scramble — 209

Joanna Szyłko-Kwas

“A Window onto the World”? On European Themes Presented in the Polish Przekrój Weekly Magazine — 221

Camelia Beciu and Dana Popescu-Jourdy

Media and Catastrophic Events during the Cold War: Between Ideological Borders and Solidarity — 231

Contributors — 255

Index of Institutions and Names — 259