

Contents

Introduction — 1

Chapter I

Theories of oneness before Avicenna — 12

- I.1 Greek works translated into Arabic — 12
- I.2 Early Arabic philosophical works on oneness — 16
- I.3 The Ismaʿīlīs — 21
- I.4 Christian and Muslim kalām — 24
 - I.4.1 Christian kalām — 25
 - I.4.2 Muslim kalām — 32
 - I.4.3 The Bahshamite understanding of oneness — 37
 - I.4.3.1 Physical oneness — 37
 - I.4.3.2 Essential oneness and the Attribute of the Essence — 44
 - I.4.3.2.1 The essential oneness of atoms and accidents — 44
 - I.4.3.2.2 Does the Attribute of the Essence apply to wholes or essences apart from atoms and accidents? — 46
 - I.4.3.3 God's oneness — 50
 - I.5 Commentaries on Sūrat al-Ikhlāṣ — 69
 - I.6 Conclusion — 72

Chapter II

The logical and epistemological structure of waḥda — 73

- II.1 wāḥid and waḥda as modulated terms — 73
- II.2 The various senses and modes of oneness — 84
- II.3 Multiplicity's relation to oneness — 93
- II.4 Apprehending oneness and multiplicity — 94

Chapter III

Oneness, existence, and the subject matter of metaphysics — 96

- III.1 Avicenna's two explanatory models — 96
- III.2 The problematic relation between mawjūd/wujūd and wāḥid/waḥda — 107
- III.3 Metaphysics and God's oneness and existence — 120
 - III.3.1 Avicenna's programmatic expositions of theology — 120
 - III.3.2 Simplicity and Avicenna's theological arguments — 122
 - III.3.3 The Neoplatonic background — 130
- III.4 Conclusion — 135

Chapter IV

The metaphysical status of oneness — 137

- IV.1 Avicenna's refutation of earlier views — 137

- IV.2 The metaphysical status of numbers and waḥda — 139
- IV.3 waḥda as a concomitant and accident of quiddity — 142
- IV.4 lawāzim al-lawāzim: the concomitants of waḥda and kathra — 153

Chapter V

Kindī, Fārābī, and Yaḥyā on essential and accidental oneness — 155

- V.1 Per se and per accidens — 155
- V.2 The Kindīan interlude — 158
- V.3 The Fārābīan connection — 163
- V.4 Avicenna's elaboration on his predecessors — 171

Chapter VI

Avicenna's Doctrine of Essential Oneness — 182

- VI.1 God's oneness — 182
 - VI.1.1 Divine oneness and the notion of per se or bi-l-dhāt — 182
 - VI.1.2 Self-identity and God's essential oneness — 187
 - VI.1.3 kalām and other precedents on God's self-identity — 192
 - VI.1.4 The problematic evidence of the Ta'liqāt and Mubāḥḥathāt — 195
 - VI.1.5 Conclusion — 202
- VI.2 The essential oneness of the pure quiddities — 202
- VI.3 Oneness, quiddity, and the mereological analysis — 224
- VI.4 ḥaqīqa, essential oneness, and individual oneness — 232
- VI.5 Self-awareness, self-intellection, and essential oneness — 261
- VI.6 Differences and parallels between Avicenna and the Bahshamiyya — 263
- VI.7 Some implications for the later reception of Avicenna's thought: John Duns Scotus' theory of the unity of the common nature — 267
- VI.8 Summary and conclusion — 274

Chapter VII

Some outstanding theological issues — 279

- VII.1 Oneness as a negative attribute of God — 279
- VII.2 Oneness and perfection — 295

Conclusion — 302

Bibliography — 306

- Primary sources — 306
- Secondary literature — 310

Index of philosophical and theological notions — 320

Index of historical names and groups — 325