

1	Introduction	1
	References	9
2	Labour Migration as an Exampe of the Transnationalization of Work	11
2.1	The Transnationalization of Work	11
2.2	International Labour Migration in the 21st Century	16
2.3	A Transnational Mobility Space in Europe	19
2.4	Characteristics of Transnational Labour Mobility in Europe	21
2.5	The Regulation of European Labour and Service Mobility	24
2.6	Summary	31
	References	31
3	Transnational Labour Mobility in Europe in the 21st Century	39
3.1	A New Dynamic of Labour Mobility in Europe	39
3.2	Socio-Demographic Characteristics of Intra-European Labour Mobility	49
3.3	Labour Market Effects	65
3.4	Summary	68
	References	68
4	Germany: New Migration In-Between a Job Market Boom, Skill Shortages and Precarious Mobility	75
4.1	Intra-European Migration, Eastern Enlargement, and a Restricted Labour Market	75

4.2	Post-2011: Migration into an Open and Booming Labour Market	79
4.3	Labour Market Effects and “Atypical” Employment.	84
4.4	An “Ratchet Effect Downwards”? The (Re-)Regulation of the Labour Market	88
4.5	Summary	94
	References.	95
5	Austria: Migration Into an Open Labour Market in the “Middle of Europe”	101
5.1	Intra-European Mobility, Eastern Enlargement, and a Restricted Labour Market	102
5.2	Post-2011: Migration into an Open Labour Market.	104
5.3	Transnational Mobility and “Atypical” Employment	108
5.4	Re-Regulation, Equal Pay and an Enforcement Problem	113
5.5	Summary	117
	References.	119
6	Restricted Mobilities In-Between the COVID-19 Pandemic and Brexit.	123
6.1	Europe and the World in Spring 2020	124
6.2	Labour Mobility in -between “Systemic Importance” and Precarity	126
6.3	Save the German Asparagus with Domestic Harvest Workers?.	128
6.4	24-Hour Mobile Care in Austria: Cross-Border Commuters in the Pandemic	131
6.5	Regained Sovereignty? Brexit, COVID-19, and a Shortage of Truck Drivers.	134
6.6	Summary	138
	References.	138
7	European Labour Mobility in Uncertain Times	143
	References.	147