

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Translators' Introduction: Synthetic Mantics	ix
Iain Hamilton Grant and Jason M. Wirth
I. The audacity of being	ix
II. The ubiquity of creation	xii
A readers' guide to Hogrebe's work	xix
Books by Wolfram Hogrebe	xxii
Author's Foreword to the English Edition	xxiv
Author's Foreword to the Italian Edition (2011)	xxviii
 Predication and Genesis	 1
 I. Foreword	 3
 II. Schelling and Dante: An Introduction to Schelling's Thinking	  11
1. Lectura dantis	11
2. The idea of a new mythology	14
3. The great poem about nature	17
4. Schelling's interest in Dante	19
5. Schelling's task of a poetic version of the new mythology	21
6. Dante as archetype for The Ages of the World	24

7. The task of an argumentative reconstruction of The Ages of the World	28
III. Transition to a Reconstruction of The Ages of the World : Metaphysics and the Theory of Predication	36
8. Metaphysics and the conditions of successful predication	37
9. Metaphysics and the adequacy conditions of predication	42
10. Metaphysics and the existential conditions of predication	46
11. Starting conditions of predication: Kant's theory of the transcendental ideal	52
12. Schelling's engagement with Kant's transcendental ideal	58
13. Towards a theory of predicative elementary particles	63
IV. Predication and Genesis: The Ages of the World	73
14. The predication-theoretical venture of The Ages of the World	75
15. Original negation and original affirmation	77
16. Predicative rotation	87
17. From chaos to order	92
18. Self-organisation and unity	97
19. Schelling's world formula	103
20. Reason and madness	109
V. Afterword	122
Postface: The Ontology of Predication in Schelling's The Ages of the World Markus Gabriel	126
Index	142