

Contents

Acknowledgements — VII

Gabriel Danzig, David Johnson and David Konstan

Introduction: Xenophon's virtues — 1

Gabriel Danzig

Chapter 1

Xenophon on virtue, an overview — 11

Christopher Tuplin

Chapter 2

The cardinal (and other) virtues in the story of the Ten Thousand — 41

David M. Johnson

Chapter 3

Courage in Xenophon — 75

Claudia Mársico

Chapter 4

Pre-eminent in phronēsis: Xenophon and Aristotle on the intellectual virtues — 111

Edward C. Halper

Chapter 5

Piety and moderation — 127

Fiorenza Bevilacqua

Chapter 6

Kalokagathia in Xenophon: Is it a virtue? — 159

Pierre Pontier

Chapter 7

Magnificence and magnanimity in Xenophon (and Aristotle) — 183

Francesca Pentassuglio

Chapter 8

The charlatan, the boaster, the fraud: Xenophon's critique of alazoneia — 203

Carolin Hahnemann

Chapter 9

Laughing matters: The ability to endure ridicule as a form of self-control (enkrateia, akrasia and karteria) — 231

Christopher Moore

Chapter 10

Sōphrosunē* and self-knowledge in Xenophon and the fourth century — 255

Gabriel Danzig

Chapter 11

Sōphrosunē* and enkrateia in Xenophon's writings — 275

Milena Lozano Nembrot

Chapter 12

The problem of (in)discipline: Akolasia and kolasis in Xenophon's works — 315

Tazuko Angela van Berkel

Chapter 13

Relational virtues and moral emotions: Xenophon's psychology of χάρις — 343

Ellen Millender

Chapter 14

Xenophon on Spartan Obedience: Virtue or Vice? — 369

Melina Tamiolaki

Chapter 15

Xenophon and Aristotle on freedom — 405

Sarah Brown Ferrario

Chapter 16

Virtue and vice in the cities of Xenophon's Hellenica — 439

David Konstan

Afterword: Before virtue — 467

Index — 481