
Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Setting the Scene	1
1.2	Theoretical and Practical Contribution	4
	References	6
2	Research Methodology	9
2.1	Multi-Methodological Approach	9
2.2	Legal Interpretation	10
2.3	Comparative Law Analysis	12
2.4	Economic Analysis of Law	21
2.5	Limitations	24
2.5.1	Evaluation Criteria and Their Limitations	24
2.5.2	Linguistic and Terminological Limitations	25
2.5.3	Limitations Related to the Literature Review	27
2.5.4	Limitations Related to Replication Potential	27
	References	28
3	Current State of Research in Defined Area from Energy
	Efficiency Point of View	31
3.1	Background of Low-income Households	31
3.1.1	Poverty and Energy Poverty Definitions	31
3.1.2	Correlation Between Low-income and Energy
	Efficiency Modernisation	42
3.2	The Theoretical Background of the Landlord-tenant Dilemma	45
3.3	Relevance of Issues for Germany and Sweden	53
	References	54
4	EU Regulatory Framework	59
4.1	Legal Policy Background	59

4.1.1	European Policies as Guidelines for Future Legislation	63
4.1.1.1	European Green Deal as a Milestone in EU Climate Change Mitigation Policy	63
4.1.1.2	Renovation Wave	66
4.1.1.3	“Fit for 55” Legislative Package	67
4.1.1.4	REPowerEU Plan.	68
4.2	Treaty on European Union and Treaty on Functioning of European Union as EU Primary Law	69
4.2.1	Objectives.	70
4.2.2	Competencies	73
4.3	Secondary Law.	77
4.3.1	Introduction and Ranking of Secondary Law Sources Related to the Decarbonisation of Dwellings Occupied by Low-income Tenants	77
4.3.2	The European Climate Law	81
4.3.3	The EU Taxonomy Regulation.	82
4.3.4	The Effort Sharing Regulation	85
4.3.5	The Regulation on the Energy Union Governance.	85
4.3.6	The Energy Performance of Buildings Directive	87
4.3.7	The Energy Efficiency Directive	89
4.4	Conclusion	91
	References.	91
5	Country Reports and their Comparative Analysis	99
5.1	Introduction	99
5.2	German Context.	100
5.2.1	Non-legal Framework.	100
5.2.2	German Legal Framework	104
5.2.2.1	General Overview	104
5.2.2.2	Is any Level of Living Conditions, Including Thermal Efficiency, Guaranteed by the Legislator in Germany?.	106
5.2.2.3	Legal Barriers Related to the Decarbonisation of Rented Dwellings in Germany	117
5.2.2.4	Critical Evaluation of the Legal Situation	125
5.3	Swedish Context	128
5.3.1	Non-legal Context and Institutional Framework	128
5.3.2	Legal Framework	131
5.3.2.1	General Overview	131
5.3.2.2	Comparative Research Questions	134
5.4	Comparing Similarities and Differences of Both Countries	150

5.5	Critical Evaluation of Replicability of the Warm Rent Model to Germany	150
	References.	152
6	Possible Solutions	163
6.1	Introduction	163
6.2	Are Any Instruments Outside Rental Law Applicable to Decarbonising Dwellings Occupied by Low-Income Tenants?	164
6.2.1	Germany	164
6.2.1.1	KfW Programmes	164
6.2.1.2	Reform of Public Law Levies	166
6.2.2	Sweden	180
6.2.2.1	Green Bonds	180
	References.	182
7	Description of Results	187
7.1	Critical Evaluation of Partial Warm Rent Model.	187
7.2	Reform of Public Law Levies	188
7.3	Instruments Mobilising Private Investment	191
7.3.1	Municipal Green Bonds	191
7.3.1.1	Status quo in Germany.	191
7.3.1.2	Legal Barriers	194
7.3.1.3	Possible Solutions under the Current Legal Framework	209
7.3.2	Summarising.	212
	References.	213
8	Conclusion	219
	References.	223