Preface	vii
Acknowledgements	xii
Chapter One: On the Rhetorical Point of View	1
1. Why rhetoric declined, and what remained of it	1
2. Descartes, Leibniz and Pascal facing a crisis in logic ...	6
Chapter Two: Mind-Philosophical Logic as a Theory of Intelligence	13
1. A terminological introduction	13
2. A case study and methodological comments	18
3. Conceptual potential and conceptual engineering	23
Chapter Three: Formalized versus Intuitive Arguments The Historical Background	31
1. On how geometry and algebra influenced logic	31
2. The Renaissance reformism and intuitionism in logic ...	44
3. Leibniz on the mechanization of arguments	57
Chapter Four: Towards the Logic of General Names	68
1. From syllogistic to the calculus of classes	68
2. The existential import of general names	75
3. What names stand for: an exercise in Plato	79

Chapter Five: The Truth-Functional Calculus and the Ordinary Use of Connectives	89
1. The functional approach to logic	89
2. The truth-functional analysis of denial and conjunction	93
3. The truth-functional analysis of disjunction	100
4. The truth-functional analysis of conditionals	104
 Chapter Six: The Predicate Calculus	 112
1. Subject, predicate, quantifiers	112
2. Quantification rules, interpretation, formal systems	120
3. Predicate logic compared with natural logic	126
 Chapter Seven: Reasoning, Logic, and Intelligence	 141
1. Does a logical theory improve natural intelligence?	141
2. The internal logical code in human bodies	145
3. The problem of generalization in the internal code	152
4. What intelligent generalization depends on	160
5. The role of a theory for intelligent generalization	165
6. Logic and geography of mind: mental kinds of reasoning	170
7. Formal ('blind') reasoning and artificial intelligence	175
 Chapter Eight: Defining, Logic, and Intelligence	 183
1. The ostension procedure as a paradigm of definition	183
2. Normal definitions of predicates and names	188
3. The holistic doctrine of definition	197
4. Implicit definitions and conclusive conceptualization	203
 Chapter Nine: Symbolic Logic and Objectual Reasoning. Case Studies	 220
1. On the case study method	220
2. Cicero's reasoning in the light of symbolic logic	224
3. Martha's objectual reasoning matched by symbolic logic	231
4. Aspasia's argument confronted with predicate logic	239

Chapter Ten: Implicit Definitions and Conceptual Networks. Case Studies 257

1. A connectivist approach 257

2. The contrastive background: a definition for computers . 261

3. The case of a definition in the food market 265

4. The case of nonexistent Geist and similar cases 269
