

Contents

Acknowledgements	11
1. Rethinking Learning	13
1.1. Motivation of the current study	15
1.2. Scope of the current study and research questions	16
1.3. Significance of the current study	18
1.4. Organisation of the book	19
2. Positioning the Study	21
2.1. From writing-to-learn to learning-to-write	22
2.1.1. Writing-to-learn and WAC movements.....	23
2.1.2. Learning-to-write and WID	25
2.2. Views of knowledge and learning	26
2.2.1. Communities of practice.....	29
2.2.1.1. Concept of practice	31
2.2.1.2. Practices as the sources of coherence	32
2.2.1.3. Participation and reification.....	34
2.2.1.4. CoP, identities and roles	34
2.2.1.5. Enculturation.....	35
2.3. Theoretical framework and research niche.....	36
2.4. Communities of practice and writing	36
2.4.1. Discourse and discourse practices	37
2.4.2. Workplace discourse studies	38
2.4.3. Discourse practices, identities and roles in workplace	40
2.4.4. Expert-novice exchanges in workplace	41
2.4.5. Reflective writing and reflective practice in workplace ..	43
2.5. Genre studies	45
2.6. Systemic-functional perspectives	46
2.6.1. Ideational/experiential meaning	49
2.6.2. Interpersonal meaning	51
2.6.2.1. EVALUATION framework	53

2.7. Concluding remarks	54
3. Methodology and Research Design	57
3.1. Purposive sampling	58
3.2. The informants	58
3.3. Nature of the five disciplines.....	61
3.3.1. Social work.....	61
3.3.2. Health Sciences (Physiotherapy, Occupational Therapy, Radiography and Nursing)	62
3.3.3. Problem-based learning (PBL) curriculum.....	64
3.4. Searching for epistemological sites	66
3.5. Data generation from texts	69
3.5.1. Corpus analysis.....	71
3.6. Data generation from interviews	71
3.7. Research design and schedule	74
3.7.1. Pilot study	75
3.7.2. Main study – preparation stage.....	75
3.7.3. Main study – data collection stage.....	76
3.7.4. Main study – post-data collection stage.....	77
3.8. Relevance to my study	77
3.8.1. Use of interviews	78
3.8.2. Use of textual analysis.....	78
3.9. Positivistic triangulation vs postmodernist crystallization	79
3.9.1. Multiple ways of knowing and producing knowledge ..	80
3.9.2. Reflexivity in action	81
3.10. Trustworthiness checks: reliability and validity concerns.....	82
3.11. Transferability	82
3.12. Concluding remarks.....	83
4. Legitimate Peripheral Participation in a Community of Practice: A Conceptual Overview of Placement	85
4.1. A working definition of placement	87
4.1.1. Problematising placement from a discursive perspective..	88
4.2. Placement as Legitimate Peripheral Participation (LPP)	90
4.2.1. Placement texts: a hybrid genre	90
4.2.2. Socio-cognitive nature of activities	91
4.2.3. Negotiated character of meaning	98
4.2.4. Relational perspectives of knowledge co-construction .	100

4.3. Key contributing factors to knowledge acquisition in placement	103
4.4. Concluding remarks	108
5. Genre and Practice: Interactions of Genre-Based Practices in Placement	109
5.1. Textualisation	110
5.1.1. Lexico-grammatical choices	110
5.1.1.1. Physiotherapy	111
5.1.1.2. Social work	115
5.1.2. Multimodal resources	120
5.1.2.1. Physiotherapy	120
5.1.2.2. Social work	121
5.2. Organisation	122
5.2.1. Rhetorical organisation	122
5.2.1.1. Physiotherapy	122
5.2.1.2. Social work	130
5.3. Contextualisation	135
5.3.1. Participant's roles and participatory mechanism	135
5.3.1.1. Physiotherapy	136
5.3.1.2. Social work	138
5.3.2. Institutional requirements	139
5.3.2.1. Physiotherapy	139
5.3.2.2. Social work	140
5.4. Concluding remarks	141
6. Moving towards Disciplinary Practices: Roles of Feedback and Revision in Placement Learning	145
6.1. Coding scheme of teacher's comments (TCs)	147
6.1.1. Defining codes	148
6.2. Wayne's placement texts: an epistemological site	150
6.3. Teacher's overt corrections (OCs)	154
6.3.1. Revising discipline-specific word choices and Terminology (WC)	154
6.3.1.1. From general to a more 'technical' 'vocabulary items/phrases'	155
6.3.1.2. Moving from local to problematising 'social' issue	157
6.3.2. Revising nominal groups	159
6.3.2.1. Inclination towards nominalisation	159

6.3.2.2. Towards categorisation (CA): complex nominal groups	160
6.3.3. Revising evaluative language	162
6.3.3.1. Toning down of attitudes	163
6.3.3.2. Objectifying subjectivity.....	166
6.4. Feedback prompts (FPs).....	170
6.4.1. An overview of FPs	171
6.4.2. Analysing FPs.....	172
6.4.3. Responses to FPs: Wayne's revision	173
6.4.3.1. Text-internal FPs.....	173
6.4.3.2. Text-internal-text-external FPs	176
6.5. Concluding remarks	182
7. Roles and Identities in Placement Practices	185
7.1. Quantitative analysis of processes.....	186
7.1.1. Selection of processes for further discussion: weeding-out procedures.....	189
7.1.2. Results of quantitative analysis	189
7.2. Textually derived interpretation of roles	192
7.2.1. Attenuating active participation: playing a subsidiary role.....	193
7.2.2. Attenuated participation: playing a beneficiary role..	194
7.2.3. Active participation: playing a sub-practitioner role ...	196
7.2.4. Collaborative participation: playing an active learner role.....	197
7.2.5. Collaborative participation: playing a 'facilitated' learning role.....	198
7.2.6. Reflective practice: playing a reflective practitioner role ..	199
7.3. Contextual analysis of role-related practice	202
7.3.1. Mastery of role-specific writing code.....	203
7.3.2. Recognition of role boundaries.....	206
7.3.3. Preferred representation of role-practice	210
7.4. Concluding remarks	213
8. Conclusion and Reflection.....	215
8.1. Summary of major research findings	215
8.1.1. The constituents of placement	216

8.1.2. Discourse of learning-to-write in placement	217
8.1.3. Construction and manifestation of roles in relation to identities	219
8.1.4. Revisiting the concept of practice	220
8.2. Contributions of this study	220
8.2.1. Theoretical contributions	221
8.2.2. Methodological contributions	222
8.2.3. Pedagogical implications	223
8.3. Limitations of this study	223
8.3.1. Data collection	223
8.3.2. Transferability of findings	224
8.4. Recommendations for further research	224
8.4.1. Longitudinal study	224
8.4.2. Investigating the learning of other practices	225
8.4.3. Participant observation	225
8.4.4. Using think-aloud protocol	226
8.5. Concluding remarks: learning in a textually-mediated world ..	226
References	229
Appendix A. Excerpts from Pamela's PBL report	248
Appendix B. Social work group skills checking list	251
Appendix C. Processes with the highest frequency	254
Index	257