

Contents

Acknowledgements	v
Abbreviations	x
Chapter 1 Introduction	1
1.1 The basic problem	1
1.2. Precursors	2
1.2.1. Evaluation of Hawkins (1986)	7
1.2.2. Hale (1982)	11
1.2.3. Comrie (1986), (1989b)	12
1.3. The nature of the typology	14
1.3.1. Transparency and grammaticization	14
1.3.2. Consequences and problems of the scalar model	17
1.3.3. Ideal-typical instantiation in the Semantic Typology	20
1.3.3.1. Basic grammatical relations	21
1.3.3.2. Manipulation of grammatical relations	25
1.3.3.3. Summary of the ideal types	28
1.4. Summary	29
Chapter 2 High semantic transparency: Korean	31
2.1. Participant marking	31
2.2. The semantic range of basic grammatical relations	32
2.2.1. Subjects	33
2.2.2. Objects	42
2.3. Word order effects	43
2.3.1. Scrambling	43
2.3.2. Extractions	46
2.3.3. Raising	47
2.3.3.1. Subject-to-subject raising	47
2.3.3.2. Object-to-subject raising	49
2.4. Clause marking	51
2.5. Summary	54
Chapter 3 The interaction with other principles	55
3.1. An interactionist view of language	55
3.2. Subject and voice in Indonesian	56

3.3.	Low semantic transparency in Indonesian	58
3.3.1.	Basic word order	58
3.3.2.	Grammatical relations	60
3.3.3.	The semantic diversity of basic grammatical relations	62
3.3.3.1.	Objects	62
3.3.3.2.	Subjects	64
3.4.	High semantic transparency in Indonesian	67
3.4.1.	Raising	68
3.4.2.	Extractions	70
3.4.3.	Discussion	75
3.5.	Indonesian in the Semantic Typology	75
Chapter 4	The cross-linguistic survey	78
4.1.	The sample	78
4.1.1.	Criteria for sample construction	78
4.1.2.	The sample used in this study	81
4.2.	Left-branching versus right-branching	84
4.3.	Left-branching languages	86
4.3.1.	Malayalam	87
4.3.1.1.	Word order and case marking	87
4.3.1.2.	Grammatical relations	89
4.3.1.3.	Argument trespassing	93
4.3.1.4.	Summary	97
4.3.2.	Japanese	97
4.3.2.1.	Basic grammatical properties	98
4.3.2.2.	Manipulation of the basic participant structure	101
4.3.3.	Turkish	105
4.3.4.	Hixkaryana	108
4.3.5.	Dutch	113
4.3.5.1.	A remark on word order	113
4.3.5.2.	Basic grammatical properties	115
4.3.5.3.	Syntactic movement	118
4.3.5.4.	Summary	121
4.4.	Right-branching languages	121
4.4.1.	Jacalteco	121
4.4.1.1.	Argument trespassing	121
4.4.1.2.	The semantic range of the basic grammatical relations	124
4.4.1.3.	Conclusion: Split properties in right-branching languages	125
4.4.2.	Sawu	127

4.4.3.	Babungo	130
4.4.4.	Chinese	131
4.4.4.1.	A remark on word order	131
4.4.4.2.	Basic grammatical properties	132
4.4.4.3.	Syntactic movement	133
4.4.4.4.	Assessment of the Chinese facts	135
4.4.5.	Hebrew	136
Chapter 5 Summary of results		141
Notes		145
References		154
Language Index		167
Subject Index		168