

Contents

1	Basic Considerations	1
1.1	Economic Transformation as a Targeted and Ongoing Design Task	2
1.2	Global Character of Economic Transformation	3
1.3	Science of Economics	6
	References	11
2	Goals for Economics and Economic Transformation	13
2.1	Goals for Economics	13
2.2	Goals for Economic Transformation	20
2.2.1	Ecological Dimension	22
2.2.2	Dimension of Income and Wealth Inequalities	33
2.3	Summary and Extension Aspects	38
	References	40
3	Factors Influencing Economic Transformation	43
3.1	Technological Advancement	43
3.2	Population Trends and Migration	44
3.3	Influencing Factors Versus Objects of the Transformation	47
	References	48
4	Economic Models or Schools of Economics in Their Historical Development	49
	References	52
5	Concepts for Economic Transformation	55
5.1	Post-Growth Economy—Degrowth	55
5.2	Doughnut Economics	57
5.3	Economy for the Common Good and Related Concepts	59
5.4	Further Conceptual Approaches	62
5.5	General Objections Against the Alternative Concepts	64
	References	65

6	Actors of Economic Transformation	67
	References	71
7	Fields of Action for Economic Transformation	73
7.1	Businesses	74
7.2	Private Households	81
7.3	State	84
7.4	Commons	93
7.5	Global Economic Framework	96
7.6	(Civil) Society	100
7.7	Cooperation Between the Actors and Overarching Fields of Action	101
7.8	Overview of the Fields of Action	104
	References	107
8	Government Programs from the Perspective of Economic Transformation	111
	References	118
9	Psychological and Social Aspects of Economic Transformation	121
	References	124
10	Requirements for a Promising Economic Transformation	125
10.1	Requirements for Promising Concepts and Initiatives for Economic Transformation	125
10.2	Requirements for a Promising Implementation of Economic Transformation	128
	References	131
11	Summary and Concluding Remarks	133
	References	135
Appendix 1: Comparative Synopsis Doughnut Economics—Economy for the Common Good (ECG) (Raworth & Felber, 2018)
		137
Appendix 2: Comparative Overview of Target Aspects in Three Different Concepts as a Basis for Considerations on the Goals for Economic Transformation
		141
Index		145