

Table of Contents

Note on the text	9
Preface	11
1 Introduction	15
1.1 Background	16
1.2 Previous Research	18
1.3 Theory and Questions	22
1.4 Definitions and Methodology	25
1.4.1 Definition of the Terms 'Censorship' and 'Wartime'	25
1.4.2 Historical Data	29
1.4.3 Method and Framework	31
2 Wartime Censorship in China before 1933	35
2.1 A Tradition of 'Injunction' and 'Expostulation'	36
2.2 The Rise of Modern Journalism in China	39
2.3 The Emergence of Censorship in the Press	45
2.4 Censorship and Wartime Propaganda	50
2.5 The Ideological Theory of Censorship	53
2.6 Summary	59
2.7 Appendix	61
3 A General History of the Wartime Censorship Laws and Regulations during the period 1933–1945	63
3.1 Censorship in the Local Defence War Period (1933–1937)	64
3.2 Censorship in the Comprehensive Defence War Period (1937–1939)	69
3.3 Censorship led by the Wartime Press Inspection Bureau (1940–1945)	76
3.4 Summary	83
3.5 Appendix	86

4 Implementation of Censorship during the Anti-Japanese War 97

4.1 Changes in Censorship Organisations 98

4.2 Operation of Censorship Organisations 106

4.3 Modify, Detain and Reject 114

 4.3.1 Modify 116

 4.3.2 Detain 117

 4.3.3 Reject 118

 4.3.4 Summary 120

4.4 Inspection of Foreign Reporters and Publications 122

4.5 Interference by Secret Agents 128

4.6 Summary 132

4.7 Appendix 136

5 The Pressmen’s Attitudes and Views on the Wartime Censorship 141

5.1 Social Identity and the Function of the ‘Pressmen’ 144

5.2 Was the Wartime Censorship Necessary? 151

5.3 Does the Wartime Censorship Work Properly? 160

5.4 Which Censorship Policy was Better? 171

5.5 Summary 179

5.6 Appendix 182

6 Rival Censorship Systems and the Evolution of the KMT’s Wartime Policies 191

6.1 Journalism Censorship in Non-government-controlled Areas 192

 6.1.1 Journalism Censorship in Manchukuo 194

 6.1.2 Journalism Censorship in the Provisional Government of North China, the Republic of China Restoration Government and the Wang Jingwei Government of the Republic of China 196

 6.1.3 Journalism Censorship in the CCP Base Areas 201

 6.1.4 Journalism Censorship in the Shanghai and Hong Kong Concessions 204

 6.1.5 Journalism Censorship in Colonial Taiwan 205

 6.1.6 Summary 207

6.2 Post-war Censorship in China 209

6.2.1 The Rejecting Censorship Movement:
The End of Wartime Censorship 210

6.2.2 A Triumph in Military Control and Journalism 217

6.3 Summary 222

6.4 Appendix 225

7 Conclusion 229

7.1 Summary of Findings 229

7.2 The Answer to the Main Question 232

7.3 An Examination of the Influence of the Wartime Censorship 236

7.3.1 Did the Wartime News Censorship lead to the Decline of the Chinese Newspaper Industry?. 237

7.3.2 Did the Wartime Censorship serve the Dictatorship and Significantly Damage the Freedom of Speech? 240

7.3.3 A Superb Demonstration of how to Check Effectively 243

7.4 An Analysis of Natures 246

7.5 Limitations and Ways Ahead 248

7.6 Appendix 250

Bibliography 251

1 Databases 251

2 Primary Sources 251

3 Secondary Sources 257