

Contents

List of illustrations	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
List of abbreviations	xi
 Introduction: Mentalities as revealed by the history of policing	 1
Part I Policing the messy, painful aftermath of defeat. The special conditions and circumstances of policing a post-conflict city, occupied by foreign troops
1 Year zero/zero hour	21
2 Restoring order: Rebuilding the police	40
3 Allied occupation itself a source of crime	61
4 The non-crime of interracial sex	82
Part II Cutting the Gordian knot of overlapping, entangled jurisdictions. The policing implications of ripping a town in two in the opening battles of the 'cold war'
5 Initial cooperation and attempts at four-power government	103
6 The splitting of the police, 1948	123
7 Policing public order without East-West cooperation	142
8 The Soviet Blockade and Allied Airlift	164
Part III Cases of continued cross-border crime amid divided policing. Stopping cross-border crime sprees in their tracks, despite limits on police cooperation
9 Cross-border capers: The Gladow Gang	185
10 The 'charming murderess': Elisabeth Kusian	205
Conclusion	224
 Bibliography	 237
Index	247