

Contents

Introduction — 1

- 1 Beyond the human? — 1
- 2 Philosophical anthropology — 4
- 3 Constructing the world — 7
- 4 Media theory and philosophy — 9
- 5 Philosophy as an interface science — 10

Chapter I:

Towards a Philosophical Mediology — 14

- 1 Philosophy of technology — 16
- 2 Media theory — 18
- 3 Simondon: technical objects and information — 21
- 4 Philosophy of information — 26
- 5 Mediology — 34

Chapter II:

Media, Mediation, Mediality — 40

- 1 Media — 41
 - 1.1 Media and channels — 42
 - 1.2 Media in the proper sense — 45
 - 1.3 The body as a medium? — 46
 - 1.4 Media and their function — 51
 - 1.5 Media and “new” media — 53
 - 1.6 Iridescence — 60
- 2 Mediation — 63
 - 2.1 Media and mediation — 63
 - 2.2 Transmission and communication — 65
 - 2.3 Information and individuation — 69
 - 2.4 Individuation and mediation — 70
 - 2.5 Hermeneutics — 72
- 3 Mediality — 74
 - 3.1 Risks of disindividuation — 75
 - 3.2 Infuriation — 78
 - 3.3 Seduction — 81

Chapter III:

Techno/Cultural: Defining the Interface — 84

- 1 Privileged places — 84
- 2 Definitions — 89
 - 2.1 General definition — 90
 - 2.2 Computer interface — 93
 - 2.2.1 Intraface — 98
 - 2.2.2 Subface — 100
 - 2.2.3 Human-computer interface — 101
- 3 Visual (interface) culture — 107
- 4 Digital thresholds — 110

Chapter IV:

Perception: Visual Interfaces and Techno-Aesthetics — 114

- 1 The failure of aesthetic consciousness — 114
- 2 Reductionism — 120
- 3 Archaeology of optical media — 123
 - 3.1 Analogue and digital — 124
 - 3.2 The conditioned vision — 127
 - 3.3 Genealogy of the interface — 128
 - 3.3.1 Linear perspective and Camera Obscura — 129
 - 3.3.2 Laterna Magica and the screen — 132
 - 3.3.3 Prehistory of cinema — 133
 - 3.3.4 Domestic fruition — 135
 - 3.3.5 Cathode Ray Tube — 137
 - 3.3.6 Digital screens — 145
- 4 Rehabilitating aesthetics — 150
 - 4.1 Rational aesthetics — 151
 - 4.2 Techno-aesthetics — 153

Chapter V:

Action: Ideological Interfaces and Mediopolitics — 157

- 1 Techno-aesthetics and attention — 158
- 2 From attention to action — 163
 - 2.1 Training — 163
 - 2.2 Transindividuality — 166
 - 2.3 Technical objects and human action — 169
 - 2.4 Cybernetics — 170
 - 2.4.1 System — 172
 - 2.4.2 Information — 173

- 2.4.3 Modulators and metastability — 173
- 2.4.4 Feedback — 176
- 2.4.5 The role of the interface — 177
- 2.4.6 A new conception of determinism — 178
- 3 Non-recognition — 183
- 4 Mediopolitics — 192
- 5 Ideological applications — 196
- 6 A new theory of action — 201

Conclusion, or: What Is to Be Done? — 206

- 1 Awareness — 207
- 2 Medial education — 209
- 3 Alternative design — 210
 - 3.1 Alternative software — 210
 - 3.2 Alternative hardware — 212
 - 3.3 Resistance — 214

References — 216

- Books — 216
- Essays in books — 222
- Articles in journals — 224
- Websites — 226
- Emails — 226

Acknowledgements — 227

Afterword — 228

- Graziano Lingua
 - Through the Screen*, and What We Can Find There — 228
 - A dehumanised humanism — 229
 - Ethics, aesthetics, and politics — 230
 - From diagnosis to prognosis — 231

Analytical Index — 233