

Contents

Foreword 8
 The goals and content 8

Foreword to the English edition. 11

Introduction 12
 What is “romantic”? 12 – Legato as basic touch 13 – On the phenomenon of style 14 – “Expression” 16
 – The sources and their authors 18 – German sources: Organ tutors and editions 18 – Piano methods /
 Theoretical writings 20 – French sources 21

Bibliography (sources and editions) 25
 I. Primary and secondary sources 25 – II. Selected editions 32

Part A. Technical foundations

Chapter I. Basic technique and primary musical issues 39

I.1. Sitting at the organ: posture 39 (Economy of movement – Sit upright – Position of the upper body – Position of the arm and hand – Positioning the fingers)

I.2. Touch 43
 The impulse from the finger – shaping the tone 43 – The pulling away of the fingertips (Schnellen) 45 –
 The impulse from the wrist 46 – The impulse from the elbow joint 48 – The impulse from the whole upper body – the shoulder joint 50 – Two types of touch in one hand 51 – The simultaneous use of various touch impulses in both hands or arms 53 – Various types of touch in quick succession 53 – Touch with flat fingers 54 – Lateral movements of the hand 54 – Lateral movements of the wrist and elbow 54 – Shaking of the hand 55

I.3. Articulation 56
 Legato 58 – Modification of legato 59 – “Brilliant playing” 62 – Further examples of detached performance of unmarked passages 65 – “Over-legato” (tutti tenuti / “Alles gehalten”) 68 – Staccato 70 – Portamento (portato) 76 – On the articulation of repeated notes 77 – Tenuto and the tenuto stroke 79
 – Supplying or completing articulation marks where none is given 81 – Closing remarks 82

I.4. Fingering 85
 Finger substitution 85 – Sliding from one key to an adjacent one with the same finger 87 – Examples from the repertoire 90 – Scale fingerings 91 – The chromatic scale 93 – Fingering of intervals 93 (Thirds 93 – Fourth 95 – Fifth 96 – Sixth 96 – Octaves 98) – Fingering of chords and broken figurations 99 – Repeated notes 100 – Crossing over and under with the fingers 100 – Passing one hand over another 101
 – Playing on two manuals with one hand simultaneously 102 – One finger on two keys, either at the same time or one after the other 104 – Two fingers on one key 105 – Crossing over of hands 105 – Suggestions for fingering 106 (Dividing the parts between the hands 106 – Further individual cases 109) – Fingering as an aid to articulation and phrasing 109

I.5. Pedal playing 113
 On the history of pedal playing 113 – Rules 115 – Pedalling in scales and diatonic passages 116 – Pedalling for the chromatic scale 120 – Pedalling for leaping figurations 120 – Pedalling for repeated notes 122 – Substitution 123 – Sliding with the toe between adjacent keys 123 – Sliding with the heel 124 – Double pedal – polyphony 125 – Types of touch 126 – The pedal trill 127 – The pedal as an aid to the manuals 129 – Further exercises and examples 131 – Pedalling as an aid to articulation and phrasing 134 –
 Summary 135

I.6. Practising 137
 Further suggestions 140

Part B. The aesthetics of sound

Chapter II. On organs and registration	144
II.1. Germany	145
Changes in the aesthetics of sound at the beginning of the 19th century 145 – Abbé Vogler 146 – The organ as orchestra 147 – The German-romantic (“symphonic”) organ 148 – Changes in the aesthetics of sound in the late 19th and early 20th centuries 150 – Registration – information from the sources 152 (Justin Heinrich Knecht 152 – Johann Gottlob Werner 153 – Wilhelm Volckmar 154 – Johann Georg Herzog 154 – Hugo Riemann 155 – Ernst Friedrich Richter/Hans Menzel 155 – Karl Straube 157) – The crescendo 158 – Registration indications in the music of various composers 160 (Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy 160 – Robert Schumann 163 – Johannes Brahms 164 – Franz Liszt 166 – Julius Reubke 168 – August Gottfried Ritter 169 – Josef Gabriel Rheinberger 170 – Max Reger 170) – Manual changes 172 – Summary 177
II.2. Aspects of organ building (Germany and France)	178
The Kegellade (cone-valve chest) 178 – The Sperrventil (blocking valve) 178 – The Barker lever 179 – Pneumatic and electric actions 180 – Couplers 180 – Kollektivzüge (fixed combination pistons) 182 – The tremulant 183 – The Swell box 183 – The Rollschweller (Crescendo-Walze) 188
II.3. France	191
The organs of Aristide Cavaillé-Coll 192 – Registration: basic principles 195 – The crescendo and use of the appels (anches ventils) 196 – Alexandre Guilmant and organ sound 197 (The jeux de fond (flue foundations) 197 – The jeux de mutation (mutations and mixtures) 198) – Registration indications in the music of other composers 199 (César Franck 199 – Charles-Marie Widor 201 – Louis Vierne 204) – Some suggestions for registration on modern organs 207 – Some closing remarks 208 – Selected glossary 210
II.4. Other instruments	211
The pedal piano 211 – The harmonium 212

Part C. Interpretation

Chapter III. Aspects of musical expression in the romantic era	214
III.1. Accentuation	214
The notation of accents 215 – The various types of accent 216 – The metrical (grammatical) accent 217 – Examples of metrical accent 219 – The pathetic (expressive) accent 220 – Excursus: Varied treatment of repeated passages 224 – How is accent applied? – Various examples of accentuation 226 – Dynamic imagination in organ playing 229
III.2. The slur (—) in early and high romanticism: Articulation, accentuation, and phrasing	232
Slur placement considered historically 233 – Digression: What is a “phrase?” 235 – The articulation slur and the slur of accentuation in the nineteenth century 235 – The “inconsistent” slur 237 – The slur over the formal break 238 – How do we apply phrasing? 238 – The “continuous legato slur” or “Dauerlegatobogen” 239 – The “true” phrasing slur 241 – The simultaneous occurrence of various types of slurs 242 – Digression: Beaming as a phrasing indication 242 – Further examples of slurring 243 (Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy 243 – Robert Schumann 245 – Johannes Brahms 246 – Franz Liszt 247 – Julius Reubke 248) – Adding slurs in early romantic music 249 – Conclusion: An interpretation of the Finale Andante from Mendelssohn’s Sonate VI in D minor 249 – Closing remarks 252

III.3. Perspectives on late romantic interpretation	253
Riemann's understanding of music 253 (The rejection of the hierarchically accented bar 253 – The three ways to inflect a motif 255 – The fundamental upbeat orientation (Auftaktigkeit) 256 – Interpretation of dynamics within a phrase 258 – The "agogic" accent 258 – Emphasis at the beginning of the motif (Motivanfangsbetonung) 258 – The phrasing slur 259 – Other functions of the slur in Riemann's theory (overlapping or joining of slurs) 260 – The "reading sign" (Lesezeichen) 261) – Digression: The diametrically opposed positions of Riemann and Wiehmayer 261 – Riemann's theories as viewed by Karl Straube, Albert Schweitzer, and Max Reger 262 – Which aspects of Riemann's theory are useful for the interpretation of German romantic organ music? 268 – Articulation and accentuation 270 – France 271 (César Franck 272 – Charles-Marie Widor 274 – Louis Vierne 275)
III.4. Tempo	278
Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy 279 – Robert Schumann 280 – Franz Liszt 280 – Johannes Brahms 280 – Max Reger 281 – France 282 – Tempo indications – tempo and measure – tempo and note values 284 – Tempo relationships and tempo development 285 (Tempo relationships 285 – Levels of tempo 286 – Modification of tempo (accelerando – ritardando) 287) – Ritardando and ritenuto 288 – The accelerando fugue 288 – Summary 289
III.5. Rubato (agogics)	290
The history of rubato 290 – Advice from Czerny and Lussy 293 – Hugo Riemann's instructions 298 – Some examples from the repertoire 299 – The a tempo 301 – The "transition" 301 – The elongated upbeat 302 – Rubato and dynamics 303 – Rubato and acoustics 305 – Rubato and personal style 306 – Aural evidence of rubato 306 – Closing remarks 306
III.6. Further aspects of interpretation	308
Arpeggiation (broken chords) 308 – The delayed attack of the uppermost voice 310 – Notes communes 311 – Further examples 315 – Ornamentation 316 – The grace note (Vorschlag) 317 – The Pralltriller 318 – The (long) trill 320 – Further examples from the repertoire 320 – The mordent 322 – The turn (Doppelschlag) 322 – Other ornaments 323 – Technical suggestions 324
Postscript	326
Index	328