

Contents

|                                                                                                        |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| List of Illustrations . . . . .                                                                        | VII |
| Foreword . . . . .                                                                                     | IX  |
| Richard Schechner                                                                               |     |
| What Is »Performance Studies« Anyway? . . . . .                                                        | 1   |
| Patrice Pavis                                                                                   |     |
| The Conditions of Reception in the Theatre:Psychological and Psychoanalytical Approaches . . . . . | 13  |
| Darko Suvin                                                                                     |     |
| On the Epistemology and Pragmatics of Intercultural Theatre Studies. . . . .                           | 31  |
| Maria Shevtsova                                                                                 |     |
| Sociocultural Performance Analysis. . . . .                                                            | 45  |
| Jean-Marie Pradier                                                                              |     |
| Ethnoscenology: The Flesh is Spirit. . . . .                                                           | 61  |
| Ian Watson                                                                                      |     |
| Intercultural Performance: Barter, Cultural Exchange and Reception . . . . .                           | 83  |
| Deborah A. Kapchan                                                                              |     |
| Exchanging Lies and Creating Truths: Intentionality inMoroccan Marketplace Performance. . . . .    | 97  |
| Fawzia Afzal-Khan                                                                               |     |
| Desiring Methodology: Performing Postcolonial Theatre Anthropologyin Pakistan . . . . .            | 111 |
| Andrew Gurr                                                                                     |     |
| Versatile Venues and the Displacement of the Globe . . . . .                                           | 127 |
| Richard Beacham                                                                                 |     |
| Virtually There: Computer-assisted Reconstructions of AncientTheatrical Spaces . . . . .           | 143 |

|                                                                                                                 |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Gad Kaynar                                                                                               |     |
| Audiences and Response-Programming Research and theMethodology of the Implied Spectator . . . . .           | 159 |
| Susan Bennett                                                                                            |     |
| Watching Another, Viewing Theatre: Questions for AudienceReception and Cross-Cultural Performance . . . . . | 175 |
| Janet Adshead-Lansdale                                                                                   |     |
| Narratives and Metanarratives in Dance Analysis . . . . .                                                       | 189 |
| Marcia B. Siegel                                                                                         |     |
| Using Lexicons for Performance Research: Three Duets . . . . .                                                  | 205 |
| Linda Suny Myrsiades                                                                                     |     |
| Performance Analysis Through Field Research: The GuerrillaTheatre in Greece Under Nazi Occupation . . . . . | 217 |
| Lisa Wolford                                                                                             |     |
| Methodological Issues in the Documentation and Analysis ofGrotowski's Art as Vehicle . . . . .              | 239 |
| Notes on Contributors . . . . .                                                                                 | 257 |
| Index . . . . .                                                                                                 | 263 |