1 Introduction — 1

- 1.1 Why Care About Consciousness — 1
 - 1.1.1 Nothing To Care About — 3
 - 1.1.2 An Intellectual Challenge — 4
 - 1.1.3 Practical and Ethical Applications — 4
 - 1.1.4 A Hopeful Research Project in Philosophy and Science — 5
- 1.2 Consciousness and the Scientific Paradigm — 8
 - 1.2.1 Epistemic Objectivity and Ontological Subjectivity — 9
 - 1.2.2 Dealing With the Subjective Ontology of Consciousness — 13
- 1.3 Neural Correlates of Consciousness (NCCs) — 16
 - 1.3.1 Defining NCC — 18
 - 1.3.2 Explanatory Limits and Fuzziness of NCC Research — 21
- 1.4 The Hard Problem of Consciousness — 24
- 1.5 Consciousness: Toward A Diachronic Approach — 28
 - 1.5.1 Consciousness in Time: a Thought Experiment — 31
 - 1.5.2 Excursus on Objective Knowledge — 34

2 The Metaphysical Problem of Consciousness — 40

- 2.1 The Mind-Body Problem: the Mind in a Physical World — 40
 - 2.1.1 The Set of Premises to the Puzzle of the Inconsistent Triad — 41
 - 2.1.2 Only a Physicalist Framework Can Account for Causation — 42
 - 2.1.3 The Subjective Character of Consciousness is Irreducible — 43
 - 2.1.4 Mental Causation — 50
 - 2.1.5 The Joint Inconsistency of the Set of Premises — 51
- 2.2 A Sketch of the Metaphysical Landscape — 53
 - 2.2.1 Ontological Monism — 54
 - 2.2.2 Ontological Dualism — 58
 - 2.2.3 Supervenience as Framework for Physicalism — 61
- 2.3 The Metaphysical Background for the Natural Problem — 64

3 The Natural Problem of Consciousness — 66

- 3.1 Adopting Naturalism: A Pragmatic Approach — 67

3.2	Consciousness as Contingent Biological Phenomenon —	70
3.2.1	Dismissing Solipsism in the Actual World —	73
3.2.2	Dismissing Panpsychism in the Actual World —	74
3.3	Why Are There Feeling Beings in the Natural World? —	76
4	Consciousness as Feeling. Defining Criteria —	80
4.1	State, Creature, and Being Consciousness —	80
4.1.1	State Consciousness —	82
4.1.2	Creature Consciousness —	86
4.1.3	Being Consciousness —	88
4.1.4	Intentionality and Transitivity —	88
4.1.5	Higher-Order Theories of Consciousness —	90
4.2	Attempts to Characterize Consciousness —	92
4.2.1	Consciousness: A Mongrel Concept —	92
4.2.2	Toward a Taxonomy of Intransitive Being Consciousness —	95
4.2.3	Candidate Feeling Beings: A Problem —	97
4.3	Defining Criteria for Being Consciousness —	98
4.3.1	Limits of Characterizations of Consciousness —	98
4.3.2	Consciousness as Sentience and Responsiveness —	101
4.3.3	Consciousness as Wakefulness and Normal Alertness —	103
4.3.4	Phenomenal Consciousness (What it is Like) —	106
4.4	Feeling and Self-Consciousness —	110
5	Working Out Diachronic Claims —	115
5.1	Feeling Presently Exists —	115
5.2	Phylogenetic Evolution and Ontogenetic Development —	120
5.2.1	Phylogenetic Evolution —	120
5.2.2	Ontogenetic Development —	121
5.3	Two Fine-Grained Questions —	122
5.3.1	Radical Change Claim VS Qualitative Change Claim —	124
5.4	Examining the Two Fine-grained Diachronic Claims —	126
5.4.1	Feeling Is Subject to Phylogenetic Evolution (a) —	126
5.4.2	Feeling Is Subject to Ontogenetic Development (b) —	131
5.5	Summary of the Claims and of the Conclusions —	136
6	Why Do We Feel? —	137
6.1	Feeling in an Evolutionary Framework —	137
6.1.1	A Darwinian Evolutionary Theory —	137
6.1.2	A Sketch of the Hypothesis —	143
6.2	Distinguishing Kinds of Function —	144

6.3	The Evolutionary Function of Feeling —	146
6.3.1	Feeling as Nonadaptation —	148
6.3.2	Feeling as Maladaptive Trait —	148
6.3.3	Feeling as Adaptation —	148
6.3.4	Feeling as Exaptation —	149
6.3.5	Feeling as Preadaptation —	149
6.3.6	Feeling as Spandrel —	149
6.3.7	Conclusion on the Evolutionary Function of Feeling —	150
6.4	Could Feeling Have a Biological (Causal) Function? —	151
6.4.1	Epiphenomenalism —	151
6.4.2	Reasons To Put Epiphenomenalism Aside —	153
7	A Hypothetical Biological Function of Feeling —	155
7.1	How To Settle the Question: A Methodological Point —	155
7.2	Bottom-up Approach —	157
7.3	Biological Function: a Top-Down Hypothesis —	165
7.3.1	Biological Efficacy and Strategies to Maximise Profit —	165
7.3.2	Global Qualia and Multiple Realization —	167
7.3.3	Similarities Across Global Qualia —	171
7.3.4	The Example of Valence —	173
7.3.5	The Reliability Of Valence Feelings —	177
7.3.6	Valence Feelings and Causation —	182
7.3.7	Learning to Behave Effectively —	184
7.3.8	Summary of the Hypothesis and Preliminary Conclusion —	189
8	Causation and the Conscious Mind —	191
8.1	Theories of Causation —	191
8.1.1	Causation as Constant Conjunction —	192
8.1.2	Causation as Counterfactual Dependence —	196
8.1.3	Causation as Transfer of Physical Quantities —	198
8.1.4	Viable Theories of Causation —	199
8.2	Testing the Consciousness-Behaviour Causal Relation —	199
8.3	A Conservative Conclusion to the Natural Problem —	204
	Appendix: Objections and Replies —	207
	Bibliography —	223
	Name Index —	235
