

Contents

Tamás Turán and Carsten Wilke

Wissenschaft des Judentums in Hungary: An Introduction — 1

Testimonies

Géza Komoróczy

The Rabbinical Seminary of Budapest and Oriental Studies in Hungary — 37

The Rabbinical Seminary and the War Years

An Interview with Chief Rabbi József Schweitzer — 55

Joshua Blau

Was R. Saadia Gaon's Arabic Translation of the Pentateuch Meant for Muslims Too? — 70

Elective Affinities

Carsten Wilke

From Talmud Torah to Oriental Studies: Itineraries of Rabbinical Students in Hungary — 75

Gábor Schweitzer

Scholarship and Patriotism: Research on the History of Hungarian Jewry and the Rabbinical Seminary of Hungary—the First Decades — 99

Vilmos Voigt

Suspension Bridge of Confidence: Folklore Studies in Jewish-Hungarian Scholarship — 108

Transnational Connections

Ismar Schorsch

Beyond the Classroom: The Enduring Relationship between Heinrich L. Fleischer and Ignaz Goldziher — 119

Mirjam Thulin

Connecting Centers of Wissenschaft des Judentums: David Kaufmann in Budapest, 1877–1899 — 157

Catherine Hézser

The International Context of Samuel Krauss's Scholarship: Network Connections between East and West — 175

Figures — 193

Re-Orientalism

Ottfried Fraisse

From Geiger to Goldziher: Historical Method and its Impact on the Conception of Islam — 203

Tamás Turán

Academic Religion: Goldziher as a Scholar and a Jew — 223

Shaul Shaked

From Bacher to Telegdi: The Lure of Iran in Jewish Studies — 271

Untrodden Paths

Günter Stemberger

Meir Friedmann—A Pioneering Scholar of Midrash — 283

Isaiah M. Gafni

Adolf Büchler and the Historiography of Talmudic Judaism — 295

Paul B. Fenton

Georges Vajda's Contribution to the Study of the Kabbalah — 306

Political Confrontations

Miklós Konrád

Hungarian Expectations and Jewish Self-Definitions, 1840–1914 — 329

Christian Wiese

Defending the Dignity of Judaism: Hungarian Jewish Scholars on Christian Prejudice, Racial Antisemitism, and the Exclusion of Wissenschaft des Judentums, 1880–1914 — 349

András Kovács

The Decades of an Ending: The Budapest Rabbinical Seminary after the Shoah — 373

Appendix

Bibliography — 385

Index — 399

The Authors — 415