

Table of Contents

|                                                                                                                               |      |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
| Preface .....                                                                                                                 | V    |
| Abbreviations .....                                                                                                           | XIII |
| Chapter 1: Introduction .....                                                                                                 | 1    |
| 1.1 When does a text depict a form of Judaism? .....                                                                   | 3    |
| 1.2 Group categories and their boundaries in the Gospel of Mark .....                                                  | 7    |
| 1.3 Gentile Mark: the state of the question .....                                                                      | 14   |
| 1.4 A focus on narrative assumptions rather than the main themes .....                                                 | 20   |
| 1.5 Mark's Judaism and the meaning making of today's interpreters ....                                                 | 24   |
| 1.6 On the perils of symbolic narrative interpretation .....                                                           | 27   |
| 1.7 Chapter summaries .....                                                                                            | 30   |
| Chapter 2: The Gentile Gospel of Mark from the end of the 19 thcentury to today .....                          | 35   |
| 2.1 The messianic secret and purportedly contrasting Jewish and Christianmessianic concepts .....                 | 36   |
| 2.2 Form criticism's separation of traditions between "primitivePalestinian" and "Hellenistic" Christianity ..... | 37   |
| 2.3 Redaction criticism and supposed Gentile Galilee .....                                                             | 40   |
| 2.4 Reconstructing a markan community vis-à-vis Judaism .....                                                          | 43   |
| 2.5 Reading Gentile Mark as a whole narrative by appeal to ambiguous Sitzim Leben indicators .....                | 45   |
| 2.6 Mark with Paul and Matthew against Mark .....                                                                      | 50   |
| 2.7 Conclusion .....                                                                                                   | 53   |

Chapter 3: Jesus’s practical application of the written law in the shadow of the approaching kingdom ..... 55

3.1 The law(s) and its places in other early Jewish literature ..... 57

3.2 Mark and the law: the key texts ..... 62

3.2.1 Jesus and the Sabbath (2:23–3:6) ..... 63

3.2.2 The handwashing incident (7:1–23) ..... 69

3.2.3 Jesus and the rich man (10:17–31) ..... 79

3.3 The written law of Moses and ethics in the Gospel of Mark ..... 85

3.4 Conclusion ..... 88

Chapter 4: Jesus’s target audience in the Gospel of Mark and the clash of empires ..... 89

4.1 Patterns of Jewish universalism and exclusivism ..... 92

4.2 The scholarly construction of an implicit mission to the nations in the Gospel of Mark ..... 94

4.3 Shifting political boundaries and mixed ethnic demographics in and around Roman Judea ..... 99

4.3.1 Shifting political boundaries in and around Roman Judea ..... 99

4.3.2 First-century ethnic demographics in and around Roman Judea ..... 103

4.4 The Jewish crowds and the nations’ alterity in the writer’s narrative ..... 104

4.5 Possible and sometimes token foreigners in the writer’s narrative .... 108

4.5.1 The geresene demoniac ..... 108

4.5.2 A foreign encounter near Tyre and the second feeding account .... 113

4.5.2.1 The unnamed foreign woman and Jesus ..... 113

4.5.2.2 The second feeding miracle in purportedly foreign territory ..... 118

4.5.3 The roman centurion at the cross (15:39) ..... 120

4.6 Summary: Jesus and the nations ..... 124

4.7 Does the Gospel of Mark’s Jesus anticipate a future mission to the nations? ..... 125

4.8 Conclusion ..... 133

Chapter 5: Echoes of restoration in the Gospel of Mark’s proclamation of the kingdom ..... 137

5.1 The Kingdom of God in the Gospel of Mark’s narrative ..... 137

5.1.1 A kingdom focused gospel ..... 138

5.1.2 A future kingdom, or the story’s unrealized eschatology ..... 140

|                                                                                                              |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 5.1.3 A militant kingdom .....                                                                               | 145 |
| 5.1.4 Hints of an earthly kingdom .....                                                                      | 147 |
| 5.2 The story's contextual echoes of Israel's ancestral writings .....                                | 150 |
| 5.2.1 Israel's ancestral writings .....                                                                      | 151 |
| 5.2.2 Echoes of Israel's ancestral writings .....                                                            | 152 |
| 5.2.3 Contextual echoes .....                                                                                | 152 |
| 5.3 Echoes of restoration from Israel's ancestral writings .....                                      | 154 |
| 5.3.1 The introductory dual citation .....                                                                   | 155 |
| 5.3.2 Jesus's baptism .....                                                                                  | 157 |
| 5.3.3 Jesus's announcement of good news .....                                                                | 159 |
| 5.3.4 Calling the first disciples .....                                                                      | 161 |
| 5.3.5 Jesus's teaching and healing .....                                                                     | 163 |
| 5.3.6 Peter's good confession .....                                                                          | 167 |
| 5.3.7 Jesus's arrival and temple visits .....                                                                | 168 |
| 5.3.8 Jesus's suffering and death .....                                                                      | 168 |
| 5.3.9 The last supper .....                                                                                  | 171 |
| 5.3.10 Jesus's expected return .....                                                                         | 172 |
| 5.3.11 Summary .....                                                                                         | 173 |
| 5.4 Redefinition of national restoration in recent scholarship .....                                  | 174 |
| 5.4.1 Jesus as the new representative of Israel .....                                                        | 175 |
| 5.4.2 An assumed gentile-majority community .....                                                            | 176 |
| 5.4.3 Jesus as the embodiment of the God of Israel .....                                                     | 178 |
| 5.5 Echoes of restoration fulfilled in the expected return .....                                      | 179 |
| 5.6 Conclusion .....                                                                                  | 184 |
| Chapter 6: The death of Jesus as a ransom for scattered Israel                                               | 185 |
| 6.1 The practical authority of the written law and πίστις as trust in God in the Gospel of Mark ..... | 185 |
| 6.2 Linking human action and Jesus's self-sacrificial death in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke .....  | 191 |
| 6.3 Jesus's death "as a ransom for many" in Mark .....                                                | 196 |
| 6.3.1 Jesus's death as a ransom in Mark 10:45 .....                                                          | 197 |
| 6.3.2 The identity of the "many" in Mark 10:45 and 14:24 .....                                               | 203 |
| 6.4 Linking the salvific significance of Torah observance and Jesus's death .....                     | 205 |
| 6.4.1. Excursus: The defiling force of grave sins and expulsion from the land .....                          | 205 |
| 6.5 Jesus's death and the torn temple veil .....                                                      | 209 |

XII

Table of Contents

6.6 Conclusion

Chapter 7: Conclusion

Appendix 1: An hypothesis about the communicative context of the Gospel of Mark

Appendix 2: Sample of 90 Markan monographs published 2000–2023

Bibliography

Index of Ancient Sources

Index of Modern Authors

Index of Subjects

217

219

227

235

239

271

289

291