

Contents

Acknowledgments	11
1 Introduction	13
2 Kant's Theory of Reflective Judgment	19
2.1. General Description of Reflective Judgment	19
2.2. The Problematic Relation between Reflective and Determinative Judgments	22
2.2.1. Further Remarks on the Issue	28
2.3. The Structure of Kant's Exposition of the Introductions	32
2.4. The Principle of Purposiveness, the Principle of Systematicity and Nature: The Need for Reflective Judgment	33
2.5. The Supplementary Notions: Technic of Nature, the Specification of Nature, Analogy and Symbol	46
2.6. Kant's Problematic Transition from the Principle of Purposiveness and the Principle of Systematicity to the Aesthetic Theory	57
2.7. The Arguments on the Problematic Relation between the Theory of Reflective Judgment and the Aesthetic Judgment of Reflection	60
3 Kant's Theory of Aesthetic Judgment of Reflection	75
3.1. General Description of Aesthetic Judgment of Reflection	75
3.2. Disinterested Nature of Aesthetic Judgment of Reflection	78
3.3. Subjective Universality: The Universal Voice	81
3.3.1. "The Key to the Critique of Taste": The First Rupture	87
3.3.1.1. The Two-Acts View or the Double Process of Reflection	91

3.3.1.2. The Counter-Arguments to the Two-Acts View and Alternative Explanations	100
3.4. Kant's Aesthetic Formalism: The Subjective Formal Purposiveness as the Purposiveness without a Purpose	106
3.4.1. Definitions and the Problem of Causal Relation: The Second Rupture	107
3.4.2. Transcendental Aesthetic and the Matter of "Aesthetic Form"	114
3.5. Exemplary Necessity and Sensus Communis	124
3.6. The Harmony of the Cognitive Faculties as the Great Narrative without a Narrative: The Third Rupture	129
3.6.1. Deduction and Kant's Expositions	130
3.6.2. Exemplary Arguments for the Harmony of the Cognitive Faculties	137
4 Stage I: Re-Considering the Faculties: Imagination (and Understanding)	149
4.1. General Descriptions	149
4.2. The Position of Imagination in "A" Deduction	151
4.3. The Position of Imagination in "B" Deduction	155
4.3.1. Figurative Synthesis and Intellectual Synthesis	160
4.4. Schematism and the Implications of the Synthesis of Imagination ...	164
4.4.1. The Difference between the Apprehension of an Event and the Apprehension of an Object	168
4.5. Re-Examination of the Free Harmony of the Cognitive Faculties: The Last Attempt	172
4.6. Concluding Remarks	194
5 Stage II: Re-Considering the Faculties: Reason (and Understanding)	197
5.1. Reason and Its Relation to Understanding in the System of Transcendental Dialectic	197
5.2. Transcendental Ideas as the Pure Concepts of Reason	202

5.3. Cosmological Ideas and the Synthesis of Conditions	205
5.3.1. The Distinction between Mathematical Synthesis and Dynamical Synthesis	207
5.4. Reason as a Higher Faculty: Regulative Employment of the Ideas	212
5.5. Re-Examination of the Principles and the Nature as the Ground for the Reflective Judgment	220
5.6. Concluding Remarks	224
 6 Conclusion	 227
 Bibliography	 235