

Contents

Preface	9
Introduction: Beyond property	15
Chapter 1: Deconstructing property: Max Weber’s approach to appropriation	27
Introduction	27
The distinction between Eigentum as property and Vermögen as wealth ..	29
The concept of “order” Ordnung	33
Appropriation and closure of social relationships	36
Economic action and appropriation	40
Appropriation of Chancen , power of disposition, and property in capitalism	46
Conclusion	49
Chapter 2: Exploring the languages of property	53
The semantic domain of property	53
The universality of property	60
The economic language of property	67
The many terms of property	71
The productivity of property	79
Rights and obligations of property	83
The objects of property	88
Conclusion	91
Chapter 3: The theory of havings	93
Economics and property : An uneasy relationship	93

Property, agency, and institutional action	97
Getting names right: Resetting the standard language of property	108
Beyond property : modes of having	117
Conclusion	133
Chapter 4: Methodological case study – Havings, culture, and urban development in Shenzhen	135
Introduction	135
Basic institutions of having in Chinese socialism	136
Havings and recognition in the medium of ritual	144
Modes of having and real estate in Shenzhen	151
Conclusion	162
Chapter 5: Normative case study – More-than-human having	165
Beyond the Rights of Nature	165
Debunking speciesism in possession	168
Evolutionary ownership	172
4. More-than-human property	175
5. The universal commons	181
6. Conclusion	187
Postscript: Havings in the economy of the future	189
References	197
Figures	217
Tables	219
Index	221