

Introduction	13
--------------------	----

Part I Grammatical Relations

1 Grammatical Relations: Definition and Identification	25
1.1. From the Definition to the Identification of Grammatical Relations	25
1.2. Towards a Multifactorial Definition of Grammatical Relations	27
1.3. Psychological Definitions of Subject and Object	29
1.3.1 Psychological Definition of Subject and Problems of Individuation	29
1.3.2 Psychological Definition of Object and Problems of Individuation	32
1.4. Traditional Semantic Definitions of Subject and Object	34
1.4.1 Semantic Definition of Subject and Problems of Individuation	35
1.4.2 Semantic Definition of Object and Problems of Individuation	36
1.5. Grammatical Definitions of Subject and Object	38
1.5.1 Grammatical Definition of Subject and Problems of Individuation	39
1.5.2 Grammatical Definition of Object and Problems of Individuation	42
1.6. Conclusions	45
2 The Prototypical Approach to Grammatical Relations	49
2.1. From the Individuation to the Definition of Grammatical Relations	49
2.2. Context and Co-text in the Individuation of Grammatical Relations	51
2.3. Context and Co-text in the Coding of Grammatical Relations	55

2.4. The Multifactorial Nature of the Subject	56
2.5. Grammatical Relations as Coding Arguments	59
3 The Coding Properties of Grammatical Relations	63
3.1. Coding and Behavioural Properties of Grammatical Relations	63
3.2. Coding Properties of Subject and Object	63
3.2.1 The Case	65
3.2.2 The Trigger of Verb Agreement	69
3.2.3 Word Order	72
3.3. Conclusions	74
4 The Non-canonical Encoding of Grammatical Relations	77
4.1. Non-Prototypical Coding of Grammatical Relations	77
4.1.1 The Non-canonical Case Marking	77
4.1.2 The Non-canonical Verb Agreement	78
4.1.3 The Non-canonical Order of Constituents	79
4.2. Semantic Conditions Favoring Non-canonical Expression of Grammatical Relations	79
4.2.1 The Non-eventive Predicates	79
4.2.2 The Low Transitivity of the Sentence	80
4.2.3 The Deagentivization of Subject	83
4.3. Conclusions	84
5 Behavioural properties of Grammatical Relations	87
5.1. Behavioural Properties and Non-canonical Grammatical Relations.	87
5.1.1 The Imperative	88
5.1.2 The Valency Reduction and Passivization	88
5.1.3 Reflexivization	91
5.1.4 Causativization	92
5.1.5 The Same Subject Condition	94
5.1.6 The Relativization	96

5.2. Some Cases of Non-prototypical Grammatical Relations in Italian	100
5.3. Conclusions	105

Part II Verbless Sentences

6 Verbless Sentences	109
6.1. Definition	109
6.2. Verbless as Sentences	111
6.3. Verbless and Verbal Sentences as Double Articulated Signs	113
6.4. Verbless and Verbal Sentences as Signs with Different Degrees of Formality	115
6.5. Predication in Verbless Sentences	116
6.5.1 How Predication Has Traditionally Been Intended	116
6.5.2 How Predication Is Defined in This Work	117
6.6. Traditional Definitions of Verbless Sentences	120
6.7. Verbocentric and Non-verbocentric Approaches	123
6.7.1 Verbocentric Approaches	123
6.7.2 Verbless Sentences as Structures Without an Implied Verb: Non-verbocentric Approaches	126
6.8. Conclusions	130
7 Verbless Sentences with Noun Phrases in Spoken Italian	133
7.1. The Corpus	133
7.1.2 The LIP Corpus	135
7.2. The Selection of Verbless Sentences	137
7.2.1 Syntactic Autonomy	137
7.2.2 Prosody	140
7.3. Types of Verbless Sentences According to the Predication	143
7.3.1 Dirhematic Predicative Verbless Sentences	144
7.3.2 Predicative Non-dirhematic Verbless Sentences	147

7.3.3	Non-predicative and Non-dirhematic Verbless Sentences	149
7.3.4	Verbless Sentences Occurring with Verbal Clauses	151
7.4.	Conclusions	153
8	Grammatical Relations: From Verbal to Verbless Sentences	155
8.1.	How Is It Possible to Talk about Grammatical Relations in Verbless Sentences?	155
8.2.	Marks of Number, Genre and Person	156
8.3.	Features Which Correlate with Person and Number: Animacy and Definiteness	162
8.3.1	Animacy and Person Hierarchies	165
8.4.	Individuation of Grammatical Relations in Verbless Sentences	168
9	The Expression of Grammatical Relations in Verbless Sentences	171
9.1.	The Nominal Category	171
9.2.	Marks of Person and Other Pronouns Expressing Grammatical Relations	173
9.2.1	Marks of Person Expressing Grammatical Relations	173
9.2.1.1	Data	177
9.2.2	Non-personal Pronouns Expressing Grammatical Relations	179
9.2.2.1	Data	185
9.3.	Nouns Expressing Grammatical Relations	189
9.3.1	Nouns Expressing Subject and Object in Verbless Sentences: The Role of the Animacy	189
9.3.2	Nouns Expressing Other Grammatical Relations	197
9.3.3	Data	202
9.4.	Animacy and Definiteness of Subject and Object in Verbless Sentences	210
9.5.	Properties of the Constructions: Dirhematicity and Modality	214
9.6.	Conclusions	216

10	Verbless Sentences as Strategies of Attenuating Agency	219
10.1.	The Non-canonical Expression of the Subject in Verbless Sentences	219
10.2.	Coding Properties of Subject and Object in Verbless Sentences	220
10.2.2	The Case	220
10.2.3	The Agreement	222
10.2.4	Word Order	224
10.3.	The Low Transitivity in Verbless Sentences	227
10.4.	The Low Agentivity of Subject in Verbless Sentences	230
10.5.	Behavioural Properties of Subject and Object in Verbless Sentences	233
10.6.	Conclusions	238
11	Conclusions	241
	Symbols and Abbreviations	249
	References	251