

Contents

|                                                                        |       |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Glossary                                                               | xv    |
| Acronyms                                                               | xix   |
| Acronyms                                                               | xix   |
| Notation                                                               | xxiii |
| List of Figures                                                        | xxv   |
| List of Tables                                                         | xxvii |
| 1 Introduction and State of Science                                    | 1     |
| 1.1 Learning and teaching at German universities . . . . .             | 1     |
| 1.2 Walking - a special human gait . . . . .                           | 5     |
| 2 CoP and ZMP                                                          | 9     |
| 2.1 GRF in relation to CoP and ZMP . . . . .                           | 11    |
| 2.2 Angular momentum and ZMP . . . . .                                 | 15    |
| 2.3 Experimental Analysis . . . . .                                    | 16    |
| 2.4 Conclusion and outlook . . . . .                                   | 18    |
| 3 Foot dynamics - published research                                   | 19    |
| 3.1 The foot in walking - a constrained model . . . . .                | 20    |
| 3.1.1 Introduction . . . . .                                           | 20    |
| 3.1.2 Fundamentals of foot modeling: GRF, CoP, and CoR . . . . .       | 20    |
| 3.1.3 Methods . . . . .                                                | 23    |
| 3.1.4 Results . . . . .                                                | 25    |
| 3.1.5 Discussion . . . . .                                             | 27    |
| 3.1.6 Conclusion . . . . .                                             | 28    |
| 3.2 Foot function enabled by human walking dynamics . . . . .          | 30    |
| 3.2.1 Introduction . . . . .                                           | 30    |
| 3.2.2 Methods . . . . .                                                | 31    |
| 3.2.3 Results . . . . .                                                | 34    |
| 3.2.4 Discussion . . . . .                                             | 40    |
| 3.2.5 Acknowledgments . . . . .                                        | 43    |
| 3.3 Conclusion and outlook . . . . .                                   | 43    |
| 4 Revisiting the dynamics and energetics of the simplest walking model | 45    |
| 4.1 Dynamic basics . . . . .                                           | 45    |
| 4.1.1 Passive pivot dynamics . . . . .                                 | 46    |
| 4.1.2 Dynamics of the step-to-step transition . . . . .                | 47    |
|                                                                        | xi    |

|          |                                                                                     |           |
|----------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| 4.1.3    | Dynamic modeling and comparison to human gait data . . . . .                        | 49        |
| 4.2      | Gait energetics . . . . .                                                           | 51        |
| 4.2.1    | A general geometric approach to transitional velocities . . . . .                   | 52        |
| 4.2.2    | The smallest amount of energy for the simplest model . . . . .                      | 53        |
| 4.2.3    | Results . . . . .                                                                   | 59        |
| 4.3      | Swing leg dynamic decoupling . . . . .                                              | 60        |
| 4.3.1    | A 3-mass model of human locomotion . . . . .                                        | 61        |
| 4.3.2    | Swing leg dynamics . . . . .                                                        | 62        |
| 4.3.3    | swIP - an inverted pendulum model with swing leg mass . . . . .                     | 62        |
| 4.3.4    | Results . . . . .                                                                   | 64        |
| 4.3.5    | Discussion . . . . .                                                                | 65        |
| 4.4      | Conclusion and outlook . . . . .                                                    | 66        |
| 5 | Future research                                                              | 69 |
| 5.1      | Foot design, velocity variations, and their mechanical implications . . . . .       | 70        |
| 5.1.1    | From walking to (almost) standstill . . . . .                                       | 71        |
| 5.1.2    | A simplified foot design for human-like walking . . . . .                           | 71        |
| 5.2      | The dynamic influence of the upper body on human walking . . . . .                  | 72        |
| 5.2.1    | The challenge of understanding human walking . . . . .                              | 72        |
| 5.2.2    | Planned research . . . . .                                                          | 74        |
| 5.2.3    | Research, planned to be executed and supervised by the thesis author                | 75        |
| 5.3      | Design of bipedal robots . . . . .                                                  | 78        |
| 5.4      | Conclusion and outlook . . . . .                                                    | 79        |
| 6 | Conclusion                                                                   | 81 |
|          | Self-references                                                              | 85 |
|          | References                                                                   | 85 |
| A | Foot function analysis                                                       | 93 |
| A.1      | Equation of motion . . . . .                                                        | 93        |
| A.1.1    | CoP transformation in the sagittal plane . . . . .                                  | 93        |
| A.1.2    | Derivation of the single degree of freedom equation of motion . . . . .             | 93        |
| A.1.3    | Center of pressure . . . . .                                                        | 97        |
| A.1.4    | The simplest conceivable example of a GRF distribution . . . . .                    | 98        |
| A.1.5    | A more explicitly parametrized, streamlined form . . . . .                          | 99        |
| A.1.6    | Effect strengths of variations in the foot's mechanical inputs . . . . .            | 101       |
| A.1.7    | A small-angle approximation of the foot mechanism . . . . .                         | 103       |
| A.1.8    | The foot mechanism in terms of CoP shifts . . . . .                                 | 104       |
| A.1.9    | Stability of the foot mechanism . . . . .                                           | 105       |
| A.1.10   | The protagonist and antagonist torque contributions . . . . .                       | 108       |
| A.1.11   | The dynamics of $\sigma_{pro}$ and $\sigma_{ant}$ in their respective DEs . . . . . | 112       |
| A.2      | Fitting $\sigma$ . . . . .                                                          | 113       |
| A.3      | Event timing . . . . .                                                              | 113       |
| A.3.1    | Touch-down $t_{TD}$ . . . . .                                                       | 113       |
| A.3.2    | Take-off $t_{TO}$ . . . . .                                                         | 113       |
| A.3.3    | Push-off onset $t_{push-off}$ . . . . .                                             | 114       |
| A.3.4    | Ankle force exceeds proximal body weight $t_{F > m_p \cdot g}$ . . . . .            | 114       |
| A.3.5    | Ankle force maximum $t_{max(F_{Ank})}$ . . . . .                                    | 114       |
| A.3.6    | Ankle torque minimum . . . . .                                                      | 114       |

---

|          |                                                                                |            |
|----------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| A.3.7    | Loss of equilibrium $t_{\epsilon}$ . . . . .                                   | 114        |
| A.3.8    | Launching phase onset $t_{launch}$ . . . . .                                   | 115        |
| A.4      | Supplementary Data . . . . .                                                   | 115        |
| B | Inverted pendulum with swing leg                                        | 119 |
| B.1      | Equation of motion for the IP model with swing leg . . . . .                   | 119        |
| B.2      | Deriving the law of cosines and interpreting it visually . . . . .             | 124        |
| B.3      | Deriving the interleg angle $\varphi$ for minimal energy fluctuation . . . . . | 128        |
| C | De corrigendis adolescentiae studiis                                    | 129 |
| C.1      | Translation . . . . .                                                          | 129        |