

CONTENTS

Translator's Note	vii
Béla Bartók	1
Béla Bartók's Dance Suite	7
Remarks on a Few of Béla Bartók's Works	12
Metronomization	19
Alban Berg's Early Songs	25
On The Threepenny Opera	31
On Twelve-Tone Technique	40
Béla Bartók's Third String Quartet	50
A Polemical Exchange with H. H. Stuckenschmidt on the Topic of Lightheartedness	56
Schoenberg, Von heute auf morgen , op. 32 (I) World Premiere in Frankfurt	65
Schoenberg, Von heute auf morgen , op. 32 (II) World Premiere in Frankfurt	72

Stylistic Development in Schoenberg's Work	77
Bartók	90
Berg and Webern	96
An Initiate's Reply to Hans F. Redlich	112
Brahms' Present Importance	122
Schoenberg: Songs and Piano Pieces	128
Strictures on Sibelius	132
Introduction to Schoenberg's Second Chamber Symphony	139
Schoenberg's Piano Music	143
Haringer and Schoenberg	149
Letter to the Editors of the Lippisches Volksblatt Regarding Béla Bartók	151
Klemperer's Don Giovanni	153
Reflections on Music Criticism	162
Televised Music Is a Pointless Rigmarole: An Interview in Der Spiegel (26 February 1968)	188
Orpheus in the Underworld: On Chart-Topping Gramophone Records and the German Record-Buying Public	204
Translator's Acknowledgement	218