

Contents

1	Introduction: Why Phenopractices?	1
1	Purpose, Topic, and Form of the Present Work	1
2	The Field of Freeskiing	6
3	Theoretical Approach and Stance	8
4	The Focus: Intelligibility and Vision	11
5	The Foundation: Ontology and Epistemology	13
6	Outline of the Present Work	16
2	Vision—Seeing Lines	19
1	Introduction: The Line	19
2	The Threefold Line	23
	Excursus: The Diverging Focus of Theories of Social Practices	26
3	Reading (Mountain) Faces	27
4	From Seeing Terrain to Gazing at Landscapes	30
	Excursus: Situation Theory and Situated Awareness in Psychology	35
5	Seeing as Interaction: Formulating and Showing a Line	36
	Excursus: Knowledge and (Pheno-)practices	48
6	Professional Vision	53
	Excursus: Affordances	57
7	The Technical Dimension of Seeing	58
	Excursus: Distributed Cognition	60
8	Situated Seeing	62
3	Perception—Figuring Out the Visual Field	65
1	Introduction: On the Ridge	65
2	Seeing as Opening	68
3	Seeing-of and Seeing-in	70
4	Towards an Ethnography of Visual Fields	73
	Excursus: Extending Ethnomethodological Studies of Vision	74
5	The Janus Face of Vision	80

6	The Restless Eye	82
7	Visual Routines	84
8	The Gestalt and the Roots of Practice Thought	87
9	Gestalt-Seeing as Visual Cognition	90
10	The Temporal Structure of the Gestalt	92
11	Blending In and Standing Out	96
	Excursus I: Husserlian Phenomenology, Gestalts, and the Practice
	Turn	99
	Excursus II: Husserl on Eyeball Movement and Seeing Figures	102
4	Movement—The Phenomenal Field	117
1	Riding Down	117
2	The Paradox of Ethnographies of the Body	122
3	Achieving Amalgamation	123
4	Sensing the Dys-Appearing Body	128
5	The Phenomenal Field of Practices	131
6	The Moving Body in the Phenomenal Field	135
	Excursus: Merleau-Ponty from a Phenopractice Perspective	137
7	Subjectivity and Intersubjectivity	140
8	Seeing, Apprehension, and ‘The Brain’s Way of Touching’	143
9	The Normativity of Perception	147
10	Two Ways of Seeing: Pragmatic Versus Epistemic Seeing	149
	Excursus: Does Vision Science Necessarily Lead to Cognitivism or
	Mentalism?	154
5	Things—The Amalgam	157
1	Introduction: The Love for Equipment	157
2	The Amalgam of Practice and Its Material Aspects	160
	Schatzki on Materiality: Elements Versus Arrangements	162
3	Zeug and Ding	164
4	The Ski-In-The-Amalgam: What is a Ski?	166
5	Flex Curves—Good Data as Bad Science	170
6	On Understandings, Aspects, and Elements	175
	Excursus: Post-Structuralism, Postmodernity, and Performativity	178
7	Enduring Elements	184
	Excursus: The Epistemology of Phenopractice Thought	186
8	Bodies and Artefacts	190
9	Foregrounding and Sublating	193
10	Knowing Your Style	194
11	The Visibility of Things: What is a Good Ski?	196
6	Community—Style	205
1	Introduction: The Silence of Style	206
2	The Centrality of Style	208
3	What is Style?	209
4	“You can’t Wear Your Skis to School”—Symbols of a
	Lifestyle	213

5	Style of Life or Style of Conduct?	217
6	Towards Defining Style: Seeing versus Talking.	221
7	Style in the Media	226
8	Cultures of Style? Contra the Praxeological Perspective on Style	229
9	Is Style Embodied?	236
	Excursus: (Mis)readings of Practice Theory and their Roots in Wittgenstein on Techniques and Rules	239
10	The Learning Body and Neural Pluralism	243
	Excursus: Bourdieu's Individualistic Reading of Language Games	247
11	Storing and Transporting Style	253
7	Emotion and Space—The Arena	257
1	Introduction: "It's Really Strange When Nobody is Looking"	257
2	The Need for Teleoaffectivity	260
3	Emotional Energy	262
	Excursus: Interaction Ritual Chains	265
4	Visual and Verbal Pushing	268
5	Drive, Attunement, and Mood	272
6	Enter the Arena—Seeing Seeing	274
7	Visual Space: The Arena as a Stylescape.	277
8	The Kicker as a Visual Arena.	279
	Excursus: Foucault, Power, and Phenopractices	283
9	Position and Posture.	286
	Excursus: Why the Arena is not a Ritual	289
10	Space and Spacing	295
11	Landscape and Taskscape	298
12	Commonality and Orchestration	301
8	Time and Action—Flow.	305
1	Introduction: On Riding.	305
2	Flow: The Temporal Order of Riding	307
3	The Action-Present.	309
4	Action from a Phenopractice Perspective	310
5	Flow in Minds and Markets	312
	Excursus: The Sociology of Flow.	313
6	Taking a Turn in the Krimml	316
7	Seeing as Steering: Crucial Points	317
8	The Organization of Practical Intelligibility	322
9	Stream and Flow	325
10	Look Where You're Going: The Collective Management of Action.	329
11	A Schutzian Account of Flow	334
12	Projecting and Grasping Actions	335
13	Sedimentation and the Body	341
	Excursus: Action and the Body in Husserl.	342

14	The Problems of Projecting	347
15	Reprise: Projecting, Deciding, and the Flow of Conduct	353
16	Schutz and Schatzki: The Givenness of Order and the Temporal Rift	355
	Excursus: Schutz and Heidegger	357
17	Consequences: From Flow to Style	360
9	Understanding and Media—Seeing Style	363
1	Introduction: Of Beauty and Repulsion	363
2	Face Recognition and Style Recognition	365
3	The Mirror System	369
	Excursus: Do Mirror Neurons Verify Praxeology?	372
4	Basal Understandings versus Action Understandings	378
5	Sketchiness	381
6	Understanding Style and its Roots in Epistemic and Pragmatic Seeing	384
7	Regularity versus Similarity	386
8	Judging: Contests and the Anti-Competitive Ethos	388
9	The Instructed Flow of Judging	392
10	Juxtaposing Media	401
11	Seeing a Trick as Gestalt-Seeing	404
12	Talk and Action	407
13	Intelligibility and Understanding	412
	Excursus: The (Too) Many Faces of Intentionality	415
14	Attunement and Expression of Style	420
15	Seeing Style in Media: Lebenswelt Pairs	425
16	Beautiful Errors	429
	Excursus I: A Tyranny of Style? Wittgenstein on Images	431
	Excursus II: Luhmann and the Self-programming of the Artwork	437
10	Invention—Emergence and Stabilization	445
1	Introduction: Alaska, the Motherland	445
2	Emergence and Evolution	446
3	Circulation and Invention	448
	Excursus: The Organization of Normality	451
4	Mobility, Access, and Natural Laboratories	453
5	Orientation and Prefiguration	457
6	New Ways of Seeing	458
	Excursus: Lifestyle Sports, Job Markets, and the Habitus	461
7	From Orientation to Innovation	465
8	Inventing Problems, Finding Solutions: How Skiing was Born . . .	467
9	Teleoaffectivity and Self-Explanation	471
10	Style and Paradigm Shifts	475
11	What is Skiing? The Paradigmatic Understanding of Going Down	477
12	Defining Moments: Demonstration and Competition	480

13	Media of Dissemination: A Short Visual History of Skiing.	483
14	Media of Deliberation: Talking Skiing	487
	Excursus: Communication from a Practice Perspective	490
11	Innovation—Coordination and Evolution.	493
1	Introduction: Unfree Skiing?	493
2	Organizations: Ski Instruction	496
3	Symbiotic Fields: Ski Racing.	502
4	Media Systems: The First Freestyle Revolution	508
5	Fit to Media Forms.	517
6	The Birth of Modern Freeride	521
7	The Sponsor System	525
8	Authenticity: Skiing and Being	527
12	Summary, Conclusion, and Outlook	531
1	Style and Lifestyle: From Symbol to Tool.	532
2	New Theoretical Perspectives	534
3	Phenopractice Theory: Key Axioms	540
4	Avenues for Developing Phenopractice Theory.	546
	Appendix: Phenopractice Methodology.	549
1	Theory, Methodology, and Methods in the Practice Turn.	549
2	Participation and Observation.	552
3	Observability: Understandings, Intelligibility, and Publicness.	554
4	Delineating Empirical Phenomena	557
5	Intelligibility: Can there be an Adequacy Criterion?	559
6	Validation: Ensuring Adequacy.	561
7	Generalizability: Average, Typical, or Normal?	564
8	Conceptualizing Normality.	566
9	Data, Elements, and Media.	568
10	Research Procedure of this Work	572
	References.	585
	Index	621