

Contents

Foreword by Rupert Gethin	XI
Acknowledgements	XIII
New Acknowledgements	XIV
Abbreviations and Bibliography	XV
Sigla used in the edited sections (§§ 5.1.2, 5.3.3)	XXXV
List of Tables and Figures	XXXVII
Introduction	1
(1) Aims, method and scope	4
(2) The origins and evolution of the Theravādin exegetical texts	5
(3) The early Abhidhamma exegetical texts and their authorship	9
(4) The Sihala Aṭṭhakathā compendia as a counterpart to the Gandhārī commentaries	11
(5) The Sihala Aṭṭhakathās versus the vibhāṣā compendia?	12
(6) An outline of the chapters	17

PART ONE

The Theravādin Doctrine of Momentariness A Survey of its Origins and Development

CHAPTER ONE

1. The Origins of the Doctrine of Momentariness	21
1.1 The Dharma Theory and the Doctrine of Momentariness	23
1.1.1 Māṭṛkā and abhidharmakathā	23
1.1.2 The gradual textual evolution of the khandha-āyatana-dhātu triad .	26
1.1.3 What is everything? – the five skandhas , twelve āyatanas and eighteen dhātus	33
1.1.4 Dharmas , atoms and the doctrine of momentariness	41

1.2 The doctrine of impermanence and the conditioned characteristics .	51
1.2.1 The doctrine of impermanence	51
1.2.2 Ti-saṅkhata-lakkhaṇa : The origin in the canonical texts	53
1.2.3 Interpretations of the ti-saṅkhata-lakkhaṇa in the exegetical texts	57

CHAPTER TWO

2. The Developing Theory of Momentariness	79
2.1 Problems of the momentariness of material and mental phenomena	79
2.1.1 Momentariness of material and mental phenomena	79
2.1.2 All mental phenomena are invariably momentary	81
2.1.3 The all-encompassing doctrine of momentariness	81
2.2 The refutation of the all-encompassing doctrine of momentariness in the Khaṇīkākathā of the Kathāvatthu	82
2.2.1 The historical implications of the issue of simultaneity	82
2.2.2 The date of the Kathāvatthu and the intellectual milieu during or after King Aśoka's reign	83
2.2.3 The date of the Khaṇīkākathā of the Kathāvatthu	84
2.2.4 Analysis of the argument in the Khaṇīkākathā of the Kathāvatthu	85
2.3 The origins and evolution of the theory of the thought process in the Theravāda Abhidhamma canon	88
2.3.1 The mechanism of the origin of thoughts in the Dhammasaṅgaṇī	88
2.3.2 The basic principles of the thought process in the Vibhaṅga	90
2.3.3 A framework for the theory of the thought process in the Paṭṭhāna	92
2.3.4 The commentarial interpretation of the phrase 'corresponding attention'	94
2.3.5 An evaluation of the first and second argument and their citation in the Khaṇīkākathā	95
2.4 Buddhist epistemology in relation to the theory of momentariness	97
2.4.1 A sketch of Buddhist epistemological issues in relation to the theory of momentariness	97
2.4.2 The relative textual chronology of related issues in the different sections of the Kathāvatthu and in the Sarvāstivāda- Vaibhāṣikas' literary sources	98
2.4.3 The controversy about the perceiving agent: the eyes or consciousness?	102
2.4.4 The contiguity condition as the basic premise of the thought process	107

CHAPTER THREE

3. The Developed Form of the Doctrine of Momentariness	111
3.1 The relative duration of material and mental phenomena	111
3.1.1 The three moments theory in the * Mahāvibhāṣā	112
3.1.2 The five khandhas and the sixteen moments theory in the Vibhaṅga commentary	115
3.1.3 Sixteen or seventeen thought moments?	117
3.1.4 A comparative evaluation of the three and sixteen moments theories	131
3.2 The doctrine of momentariness and the thought process	132
3.2.1 The sixteen moments theory and the thought process in the early post-canonical texts	132
3.2.2 Why the number sixteen?	146
3.2.3 Determining factors of the duration of materiality	150
3.2.4 The nature of materiality and the * Vimuttimaggā 's interpretation of khana	157
3.2.5 The seventeen moments theory and the thought process in the later post-canonical texts	168

CHAPTER FOUR

4. The Presuppositions and Application of the Doctrine of Momentariness .	197
4.1 The denial of a post-mortem transitional period and the theory of momentariness	198
4.1.1 The origins and development of the antarābhava theory	198
4.1.2 Dispute on the intermediate state and the theory of momentariness	201
4.1.3 The Theravādin account of the mechanism of rebirth and the theory of momentariness	205
4.2 The momentary present and its selective application to the cetopariyāñāna	211
4.2.1 The concept of the momentary present	212
4.2.2 The momentary present and its selective application to the cetopariyāñāna theory	213
4.2.3 The cetaḥparyāyajñāna theory in the * Mahāvibhāṣā and the Dhammasaṅgaṇī commentary	215
4.2.4 The Theravādin theory of the cetopariyāñāna and its application of the cognitive theory	218
4.2.5 A multi-stranded view of the cetaḥparyāyajñāna theory and its historical implications	220

4.2.6 A review of David J. Kalupahana's critique of the momentary present	222
Conclusions	227

PART TWO

An Annotated Translation and Edited Sections of the Relevant Texts in the Pāli Commentaries

CHAPTER FIVE

5. Sources for the Doctrine of Momentariness in the Pāli Commentaries ...	235
5.1 The Ti-saṅkhata-lakkhaṇa	235
5.1.1 The Samyutta commentary	235
5.1.2 The edited section of the Samyutta commentary	237
5.2 Refutation of the all-encompassing doctrine of momentariness ...	239
5.2.1 The Khaṇīkākathā of the Kathāvatthu (Kv 620 ⁷ –621 ²²)	239
5.2.2 The Khaṇīkākathā of the Kathāvatthu commentary (Kv-a 198 ^{14–29})	242
5.2.3 The Khaṇīkākathā of the Kathāvatthu sub-commentary (Kv-mṭ [B ^e] 115 ^{6–11})	243
5.3 The relative duration of the material and mental processes	243
Introductory Remarks	243
5.3.1 The Pakiṇṇakakathā of the Vibhaṅga commentary (Vibh 1–12; Vibh-a 21 ⁹ –29 ⁵ ; cf. Yam-a 83 ^{7–26})	245
5.3.2 The Pakiṇṇakakathā of the Vibhaṅga sub-commentaries (Mūlaṭīkā and Anuṭīkā) (A supplementary note for Vibh-a 2 ¹⁹ –29 ²⁰)	263
5.3.3 The Yamaka commentary (Yam I 247 ^{11–12} ; Yam-a 83 ^{7–26})	266
Index of Selected Words and Subjects	269