

Contents

Acknowledgements — V

Abbreviations — XI

1 Introduction — 1

- 1.1 The sources — 3
- 1.2 Conceptual concerns in research on the contemporary sagas — 11
 - 1.2.1 Conflict and social development — 15
 - 1.2.2 Identity, independence, nationality — 17
- 1.3 Methodological concerns: Medieval literature and modern theories of memory and narrative — 20
 - 1.3.1 Communicative and cultural memory — 20
 - 1.3.2 Memory and history — 22
 - 1.3.3 Memory and literature — 24
 - 1.3.4 Memory in literature: Narrative discourse and extra-narrative contexts — 25
 - 1.3.5 Literature as a medium of memory — 27
 - 1.3.6 The memory of literature: Intertextuality, genre, and the narrative types of sagas — 29

2 Constructing identity: The beginning of Icelandic history — 37

- 2.1 The early construction of collective identity — 37
 - 2.1.1 The construction of identity in Íslendingabók — 38
 - 2.1.2 The construction of identity in Landnámabók and Kristni saga — 41
 - 2.1.3 Early Icelandic bishops as identity bearers — 43
- 2.2 The settlement narrative in Sturlunga saga — 48
- 2.3 The early history, cultural memory, and Icelandic identity — 53

3 Constructing continuity: The Saga Age and the Sturlung Age — 56

- 3.1 The conflict story — 60
 - 3.1.1 The narrative type of the conflict story — 60
 - 3.1.2 Þorgils saga ok Hafliða: Troublemakers and peacemakers — 65
 - 3.1.3 Guðmundar saga dýra: An influential chieftain as a mediator — 68
 - 3.1.4 Svínfellinga saga: Mediation and morality — 70
- 3.2 The peaceful chieftain's story — 74
 - 3.2.1 The narrative type of the peaceful chieftain's story — 74

3.2.2	Sturlu saga : The moral and political superiority of the peaceful chieftain — 78
3.2.3	Hrafns saga Sveinbjarnarsonar : The portrayal of the ideal peaceful chieftain — 80
3.2.4	Íslendinga saga : Þórðr Sturluson as the perfect peaceful chieftain — 84
3.2.5	Íslendinga saga : Sturla Sighvatsson and Gizurr Þorvaldsson as fighters — 88
3.3	Constructing a memory of continuity — 94
4	Continuity and contact: Mutual influences between Iceland and Norway — 99
4.1	Þorlákr Þórhallsson, Jón Ögmundarson, Guðmundr Arason: Saints from the periphery — 101
4.1.1	The narrative type of the travel story — 102
4.1.2	The saintly bishops and the narrative type of the travel story — 107
4.1.3	Ingimundr Þorgeirsson's travel story in Prestssaga Guðmundar góða — 112
4.2	Ari Þorgeirsson: The jarl's sword and shield — 115
4.2.1	The narrative type of the royal retainer's story — 115
4.2.2	Þorvarðr and Ari Þorgeirsson as ideal royal retainers — 117
4.3	Aron Hjörleifsson: The outlaw — 120
4.3.1	The narrative type of the outlaw's story — 122
4.3.2	Aron Hjörleifsson's escape and journey — 123
4.4	Snorri Sturluson: The court poet — 128
4.4.1	The narrative type of the court poet's story — 129
4.4.2	Snorri Sturluson's first journey to Norway — 135
4.4.3	The narrative type of the jarl's story — 140
4.4.4	Snorri Sturluson's second journey to Norway — 141
4.5	Constructing a memory of contact — 148
5	The time of transformation: Iceland's political integration with Norway — 154
5.1	Þórðr kakali Sighvatsson: The fighter — 158
5.1.1	The first conflict story: Þórðr Sighvatsson and Kolbeinn Arnórsson — 159
5.1.2	The second conflict story: Þórðr Sighvatsson and Gizurr Þorvaldsson — 160
5.2	Þorgils skarði Böðvarsson: The royal retainer — 166
5.2.1	The royal retainer's story and Þorgils at the royal court — 167

5.2.2	The peaceful chieftain's story and Þorgils as a royal representative in Iceland — 172
5.3	Gizurr Þorvaldsson: The jarl — 179
5.3.1	Gizurr Þorvaldsson as the peaceful chieftain in Sturlunga saga — 180
5.3.2	Gizurr Þorvaldsson as the jarl in Hákonar saga — 186
5.3.3	The different narrativizations of Gizurr Þorvaldsson's life — 191
5.4	Sturla Þórðarson: The last skald — 192
5.4.1	The interpretative function of the court poet's story — 193
5.5	Constructing a memory of transformation — 199
6	Integration and integrity: Iceland as a part of the Norwegian kingdom — 205
6.1	Árni Þorláksson: The statesman and the saint's successor — 210
6.1.1	Árna saga biskups as a conflict story — 210
6.1.2	Saint Þorlákr in Árna saga — 215
6.2	Lárentíus Kálfsson: The loyal cleric — 219
6.2.1	Lárentíus saga biskups as a travel story — 219
6.2.2	Icelandic saints in Lárentíus saga — 222
6.2.3	Language and the perception of identity in Lárentíus saga — 224
6.3	Icelandic saints in Guðmundar sögur — 228
6.4	Integration, integrity, identity — 231
7	Conclusion — 234
7.1	Narrative and memory — 234
7.2	Constructing continuity: Internal Icelandic relations — 237
7.3	Continuity and contact: Iceland and Norway — 241
7.4	Memory and identity — 245

Bibliography — 251

Index — 267