

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	V
1. Introduction	1
1.1 Criticism of ancient genres	2
1.2 Approaches to Hellenistic didactic poetry	4
1.3 Structure of the work	16
Part A. Theory of the didactic form	21
2. The idea of didactic	23
2.1 The term didascalicus in antiquity	25
2.2 Theories of the didactic genre in the eighteenth century	30
2.3 Ancient didactic poems in the eighteenth century	36
2.4 Didactic poems in antiquity: the earliest discourses about genre and canon	43
2.4.1 Cicero, Aratus and Nicander: the implied genre	45
2.4.2 Manilius' survey of didactic poems?	48
2.4.3 Quintilian and the working of canons	50
2.4.4 Plutarch, knowledge and the exceptional genre	55
2.5 Beyond the construct of didacticism	58
3. Hellenistic didactic poems: forms and contexts	61
3.1 How didactic poems teach: the concept of expository rhetoric	62
3.1.1 Obscure or attractive subject matter?	63
3.1.2 Didactic poetry and rhetoric: state of the art	66
3.1.3 Expository rhetoric and the form of didactic poetry	72
3.2 A booming genre: survey of didactic poems from the Hellenistic period	75
3.2.1 Accounting for the fourth century B.C.	76
3.2.2 Didactic poems and scale	78
3.2.3 Didactic poems and αἵτια	80
3.2.4 History and didactic poems	84
3.2.5 κατάλογοι and collecting	89

3.2.6 Survey of Hellenistic didactic poems	93
3.3 Performing didactic poems in the Hellenistic period	98
3.3.1 Beginnings: away from performance and the masses?	100
3.3.2 Didactic poetry and ancient schools	105
3.3.3 ἀγῶνες and ἀκροάσεις: a problematic context	108
3.3.4 Reading culture and the paratext of didactic poems	113
 Part B. The Hellenistic didactic poems	 101
4. A lesson in haute cuisine: Archestratus of Gela	127
4.1 Knowledge, rhetoric and literary culture in the fourth century B.C. ..	129
4.1.1 Performing knowledge: ἐπίδειξις speeches	130
4.1.2 The communication setting of the ἐπίδειξις	134
4.1.3 Epideictic rhetoric and the spectacle of knowledge	137
4.1.4 Epideictic rhetoric and the 'written' style	140
4.1.5 The invention of the attentive audience	141
4.1.6 Aristotle's Empedocles	147
4.2 Facts and rhetoric: displaying knowledge in the Hedypatheia	152
4.2.1 Expository segments in didactic poetry: general remarks	153
4.2.2 The setting of the poem	155
4.2.3 The rhetoric of places	161
4.2.4 The rhetoric of excellence	164
4.2.5 The rhetoric of practical advice	168
5. Recounting the stars: Aratus of Soli	173
5.1 Framing and concealing the exposition in the Phaenomena	175
5.1.1 The eccentric opening of the poem	176
5.1.2 From stars to weather-signs: hidden transition	180
5.1.3 The ἐπίλογος of the poem: delaying and closure	185
5.2 Aratus' expository rhetoric and the ambivalent addressee	187
5.2.1 The instructional mode of rhetoric	188
5.2.2 The prescriptive mode of rhetoric	193
5.2.3 The descriptive mode of rhetoric	201
5.2.4 Blended rhetoric and ποικιλία	207
5.3 Conclusions: Aratus and the modes of expository rhetoric	210

6. Useful verses: Nicander, Apollodorus and Pseudo-Scymnus ... 213

6.1 Nicander 214

6.1.1 The expository frame in the poems Theriaca and
 Alexipharmaca 215

6.1.2 Theriaca and the legacy of Aratus’ rhetoric 219

6.1.3 Alexipharmaca: a rhetoric of simplicity? 228

6.2 Apollodorus, Pseudo-Scymnus and the epitome of facts 232

6.2.1 Memorising facts in the Chronica of Apollodorus 233

6.2.2 Pseudo-Scymnus: instructions for comfortable readers 236

Conclusion 245

Bibliography 251

Index of Sources 273

Index of Names 277

Index of Subjects 278