

Contents

Preface	XI
1 From Paul to Mark – Introduction	1
1.1 Approaching the Topic	1
1.2 Objectives of the Study and Methodological Reflections	5
2 From Letter to Gospel	18
2.1 The Genres	18
2.1.1 The Letter	18
2.1.2 “Gospel” as Title in Romans 1 and Mark 1:1, 14?	22
2.1.3 The Gospel	26
2.2 The Genre-Defining Significance of the Term “Gospel” for Authors and Audiences	35
2.2.1 Beginning of the Gospel	36
2.2.2 Author and Authorization	38
2.2.3 Audience	49
2.3 Substantive and Methodological Conclusions	56
3 History of Research	58
3.1 From Gustav Volkmar to Martin Werner	59
3.1.1 Gustav Volkmar	59
3.1.2 Reactions to Gustav Volkmar up to Martin Werner	63
3.1.3 Martin Werner	66
3.2 Methodological Reflections on Gustav Volkmar and Martin Werner	82
3.3 On the Relationship between Mark and Paul after Gustav Volkmar and Martin Werner to the Present	89
3.4 Situating Our Approach within the History of Research	99
4 The Theological and Practical Treatment of Pagan Christ-Believers in Paul and Mark	102
4.1 The Proclamation of the Gospel among the Pagans in Paul	103
4.1.1 Equality of Jews and Pagans before God in Romans	107
4.2 Jews and Pagans in the Gospel of Mark	121
4.3 Pauline Connections in the Markan Narratives on Dietary Laws, the Syrophoenician Woman, and the Feeding Miracles	133

4.3.1	"Nothing is Unclean in Itself" – Mark 7:1-23 and Paul (Especially Rom 14:14, 20)	134
4.3.1.1	Mark 7:1-23 as the Wirkungsgeschichte of the Pauline Treatment of Dietary Laws?	144
4.3.1.2	Conclusion	151
4.3.2	The Markan πρῶτον (Mark 7:24-30; 6:30-44; 8:1-10, 19-21) Compared with the Pauline (Rom 1:16; 9-11)	153
4.3.2.1	The Syrophoenician Woman against the Pauline Background of the πρῶτον of Israel	156
4.3.2.2	The Feeding Miracle Narratives as Frames for the Abrogation of Dietary Laws and the Salvation of the Syrophoenician Woman	160
4.4	Conclusion	167
5	Torah and Mimesis of Christ in Paul and Mark	168
5.1	Mark's Treatment of the Commandments of the Torah	168
5.1.1	The Ritual Commandments	173
5.1.1.1	Sabbath	173
5.1.1.2	Purity and Impurity	175
5.1.2	The Commandments of the Social Torah	179
5.1.2.1	Prohibition of Divorce (Mark 10:2-12)	179
5.1.2.2	The Rich Man and the Commandment of Discipleship (Mark 10:17-31)	182
5.1.2.3	The Double Commandment of Love (Mark 12:28-34)	188
5.1.3	The Commandment of Discipleship (Mark 8:34-9:1)	193
5.1.3.1	Complementarity of the Commandment of Discipleship and the Double Commandment of Love	199
5.2	Paul's Treatment of the Torah: Intersections with Mark	202
5.2.1	Soteriological Irrelevance of the Requirements of the Torah: Universality of Salvation in Christ	204
5.2.2	Correlations between Paul and Mark	206
5.2.2.1	Spectrum of Approach to the Torah	206
5.2.2.2	Distancing from the Torah	207
5.2.2.3	Universal Access to Salvation without Requirements from the Torah	208
5.2.2.4	Pauline Parallels to the Markan Commandment of Discipleship	208
5.2.2.5	Faith/Discipleship, Faith/Grace, Atoning Death	213

5.2.3	Israel's Exclusive Election: Paul's Criticism	217
5.2.3.1	Correlations between Paul and Mark	224
5.2.4	The Torah in Ethical Instructions in Mark and Paul in Accordance with Mimesis of Christ	226
5.2.4.1	Correlations between Paul and Mark	229
5.3	Conclusion	230
6	On Understanding and Not Understanding the Mystery: Connections between the Pauline Word of the Cross (1 Cor 1-3) and the Markan Parable of the Sower (Mark 4:1-20)	232
6.1	The Theology of the Cross as Focal Point of the Logos	234
6.1.1	The Logos in Paul	234
6.1.2	The Logos in Mark	236
6.2	The μυστήριον in 1 Cor 2:1-16 in the Context of 1 Cor 1:18-3:23	239
6.3	Παραβολή and μυστήριον in the Context of Mark 4:10-13	257
6.4	Correlations between Paul and Mark	276
	Concluding Remarks	280
	Bibliography	293
	Index of References	315
	Index of Names and Subjects	334