

Contents

Antonio Benítez-Burraco & Milagros Fernández-Pérez

Introduction — 1

Section I: The biolinguistic enterprise

José-Luis Mendívil-Giró

Chapter 1

A short history of biolinguistics — 19

Milagros Fernández-Pérez & Miguel González-Pereira

Chapter 2

Biolinguistics in the context of linguistics — 45

Section II: The quest for interdisciplinarity and the challenges of technification

Eliseo Diez-Itza

Chapter 3

The naturalistic tradition of biolinguistics and the study of child phonology — 91

José Manuel Igoa

Chapter 4

Psycholinguistics and biolinguistics — 119

Silvia Martínez-Ferreiro

Chapter 5

New techniques in neurolinguistics — 159

Ron Nudel

Chapter 6

The biological basis of language: insights from genetic studies of developmental language disorders — 177

Section III: Theorizing biolinguistics

Elliot Murphy

Chapter 7

The nature of language and the structure of reality — 207

Víctor M. Longa

Chapter 8

Biolinguistics and human language evolution: On symbolism, language, and language evolution — 237

Section IV: Going practical: The applicability of biolinguistics findings

Antonio Benítez-Burraco

Chapter 9

Language disorders through the lens of biolinguistics — 279

Olga Ivanova

Chapter 10

Approaching language and aging from a biolinguistic perspective — 307

Pablo Cano López & Isabel Fernández López

Chapter 11

Biolinguistics and its impact on language teaching: Achievements and prospects — 331

Chris Sinha

Chapter 12

Biocultural evolution and human language diversity — 359

Index — 381