
Contents

1	Introduction	1
1.1	Our Life in Groups	1
1.2	Life is a Group Event	3
1.3	Group Therapy and Ethics	6
1.4	The Matrix	7
1.5	Society in the Individual	8
1.6	The Structure of the Book	9
	References	11
 Part I Mental Development as a Group Event
2	The Social Nature of Humans and the New Media	15
2.1	Narcissistic Affirmation	16
2.2	Calming Instead of Object Constancy	18
2.3	Attention in Breadth Instead of Depth	19
2.4	Virtual Groups vs. Physical Presence Groups	19
2.5	Understanding Instead of Defense	21
2.6	Concepts of Individuation	21
2.7	Fallen Out of All Groups: Loneliness	22
2.8	Affiliation and the Archetypal Heritage	24
	References	25
3	The First Groups: Prenatal Development, Birth, Early Childhood, Latency Period	27
3.1	Replacement Children	30
3.2	The Birth	31
3.3	Early Childhood	31
	3.3.1 Siblings	33
	3.3.2 Early Trauma and Defense	34
	3.3.3 Child Dispatch Homes	36
	3.3.4 The Parental Fallacy following Hillman	37
	3.3.5 Aggressive Behavior in Children	38
	3.3.6 Triangulating Groups	38
3.4	Peers—The Group of Same-Aged Individuals	40

3.5	Latency Period	41
3.6	Destructiveness in the Family	44
	References.	44
4	Youth	47
4.1	Regression in the Group.	50
4.2	The Second Family	52
4.3	Once again: School, Leisure and Interests.	55
4.4	Bad Company.	57
4.5	Training and Student Groups.	57
	4.5.1 Education	57
	4.5.2 Studies	58
	References.	60
5	Young Adulthood.	61
5.1	Young Couples.	65
5.2	Extended Adolescent Crises.	66
5.3	Committing now, Having a Child Now?	67
	References.	69
6	Midlife and the Beginning of the Second Half of Life	71
6.1	Midlife as a Turning Point	71
6.2	Couples Need Groups	74
6.3	Single and Childless People.	75
6.4	Too Much or too Little Loneliness.	76
	References.	78
7	Generativity in Groups.	79
7.1	Early Retirement	81
7.2	Generativity and the Passing on of Knowledge and Experience	82
7.3	The Age	84
7.4	Competition and Cooperation	84
7.5	Living with Transience.	86
	References.	87
 Part II Getting Healthy with the Group as a Resource
8	The Group as a Resource	91
8.1	Invitation to Change Perspectives in Psychotherapy	91
8.2	The Interaction Between Individuals and Groups	94
8.3	The Group as a Space for Experiencing the Transpersonal, Collective	96
	References.	100
9	Self-Experience Groups	101
9.1	A Broad Definition of the Concept of Self-Experience.	101
9.2	Milieu Therapy.	104

9.3	Self-Help Groups	105
	References	105
10	Therapy Groups	107
10.1	Individual and Group Therapy	107
10.1.1	Group Aspects in Individual Treatment	109
10.2	Group Capability	110
10.3	The Influence of Individual Therapeutic Thinking	112
10.3.1	Demarcation and Individuation	112
10.4	Differences Single Analysis—Group Analysis: The Group Interprets	113
10.5	Combination Therapy	114
10.6	Dyadic and Triangulated Relationships in Combination Treatment	115
10.7	Difficult Cases: When Individual Therapy is Not Enough	116
	References	117
11	Special Patient Groups	119
11.1	Narcissistic Patients in Groups	119
11.2	Trauma and Group	122
11.3	Addicted Patients in Groups	123
	References	124
12	Group Developments	125
12.1	The Course of Groups	125
12.2	The Anti-Group	126
12.3	Failed Communication	129
12.4	Fears and Their Defense in Groups	130
12.5	Interpersonal Complications and Fear of Shame	132
12.6	Sexuality	133
12.7	Ideals and Their Unattainability	133
12.8	Meeting of the Group Outside the Therapeutic Framework	135
	References	136
13	Group Leadership or Group Conducting	137
13.1	The Connecting Function of the Leaders	138
13.2	The Group-Object-Relation of the Leaders	138
13.3	The Fears and Hopes of the Group Conductors	140
13.4	Group Therapists Need Groups	141
	References	142
14	How Do Groups Work?	143
14.1	Healing through Love?	143
14.2	Interpretation or Amplification?	146
14.3	How Does Change Happen?	148
14.4	Theoretical Aspects of Transformation	150

14.5	The Successful Group Process	151
14.5.1	Overcoming the Fear of the Unknown	152
14.5.2	The Archetypal Level	153
14.5.2.1	The Dissociability of the Psyche	154
14.5.2.2	The Effect of the Group Self in Analytical Psychology	155
	References	155
15	The Group in Analytical Psychology	157
15.1	Farewell to Purely Introverted Individuation	157
15.2	Once Again: The Level of Archetypes	159
15.3	The Compilation of Groups: The Application of the Typology of Analytical Psychology	163
	References	163
16	Large Groups	165
16.1	Groups and Ideology	169
16.2	Therapists Learn in Groups	170
16.3	Societal Divisions and a Remedy	171
	References	172
17	Society in the Group	173
17.1	Social Origin and Group	175
17.2	Cultural Complexes	177
	References	178
18	Limits of the Effectiveness of Group Therapies	179
18.1	Group is Not Equal to Group	182
18.2	A Somewhat Groupless Image of Humanity	182
	References	184