

Contents

Preface	7
1 The claim of bioethics	11
1.1 Three suggestions	12
1.2 Appendix: The principles of ethics	16
2 The moral state of the embryo.....	21
2.1 SCIP-Arguments.....	24
2.1.1 The Species-argument	26
2.1.2 The Continuum-argument.....	26
2.1.3 The Identity-argument	27
2.1.4 The Potentiality-Argument	28
2.2 An argument against the human state of the embryo	30
3 The power of feelings in bioethics	37
3.1 Feeling, Wholeness and Nature	37
3.2 How does biotechnology influence our feelings	43
3.3 Why do scientists have no scruples?	45
4 Human reproductive cloning and germ line therapy	49
4.1 Reproductive Cloning.....	49
4.2 Germ line therapy	53
4.3 An anthropological framework to evaluate cloning and germ line therapy.....	56
4.4 How genetics disturbs human freedom	62
4.5 Result	67
5 Brain and Mind.....	69
6 Could computers feel like humans? (Qualia).....	77
6.1 First Case	78
6.2 Second Case.....	80

6.3	Criticism	81
7	Patients with serious brain damage	87
8	Do Humans have a free will?	95
8.1	What is free will?.....	95
8.2	The Libet-Experiment	97
8.3	Freedom means self-determination	100
8.4	Theological appendix	104
9	The problem of mercy killing.....	107
10	Eternal Dignity	117
10.1	A metaphysical presupposition of Dignity	117
10.2	A second metaphysical presupposition of dignity.....	120
10.3	Non-metaphysical approach to end of life-decisions	122
10.4	How metaphysical Dignity works in Ethics	129
11	Ethical and theological kinds of guilt	139
12	The Metaphysical Concept of Presumed Will	145
13	At the End of the Lectures	151