

CONTENTS

Foreword

vii

PART ONE: 1920–1938

1	‘What Are You Really?’	3
2	‘Half Dragged, Half Plunging, so He Sank ...’	14
3	Herr Kästner: ‘To Be Applied to the Soul’	21
4	Reverence for Writ	29
5	Racial Theory	44
6	Several Love Affairs at the Same Time	54
7	My Most Wonderful Refuge – the Theatre	71
8	A Suffering which Brings Happiness	88
9	The Door to the Next Room	98
10	With Invisible Luggage	103

PART TWO: 1938–1944

11	Poetry and the War	113
12	Hunting Down Jews Is Fun	123
13	The Dead Man and His Daughter	131
14	From Quarantine District to Ghetto	138
15	The Words of a Fool	144
16	‘If Music Be the Food of Love ...’	151
17	Death Sentences to the Accompaniment of Viennese Waltzes	161

CONTENTS

18	An Intellectual, a Martyr, a Hero	170
19	A Brand-new Riding Crop	176
20	Order, Hygiene, Discipline	183
21	Stories For Bolek	193

PART THREE: 1944–1958

22	My First Shot, My Last Shot	209
23	From Reich to Ranicki	222
24	Brecht, Seghers, Huchel and Others	235
25	Josef K., Stalin Quotations and Heinrich Böll	247
26	A Study Trip with Consequences	261
27	A Young Man with a Massive Moustache	269

PART FOUR: 1958–1973

28	Recognized as Germans	281
29	Group 47 and its First Lady	287
30	Walter Jens, or the Friendship	297
31	Literature as Awareness of Life	304
32	Canetti, Adorno, Bernhard and Others	312
33	A Tavern and a Calculating Machine	327

PART FIVE: 1973–1999

34	The Sinister Guest of Honour	339
35	Make Way for Poetry!	344
36	A Genius only during Working Hours	353
37	The Magician's Family	358
38	Max Frisch	367
39	Yehudi Menuhin and Our Quartet	373
40	Joachim Fest and Martin Walser	382
41	"Tis a Dream ..."	391
42	Thanksgiving	393
	Index	395